Post-War Program

Army Reorganization and the Army Code

BY COL. ALFRED C. BOWMAN, GSC

(Colonel Bowman heads the Statutory Revision Group, Office of the Army Comptroller, which is preparing a new Army organizational statute and a simplified code designed to restate and rearrange all statutory law affecting the Army.)

THE necessity of physical adjustment to postwar conditions is one of the Army's historic recurring afflictions. Redistributing weight and strength to build a healthy organizational body for the peacetime job has required radical and painful treatment after every war.

Col. Bowman

Because of the tremendous complexity and scope of modern global combat, adjusting to a size and shape which Congress and the people will tolerate in peacetime presents this time an even more difficult problem than after earlier expansions.

Until the Army is organized on a permanent basis which will permit it to expand rapidly and operate without fundamental organizational change, these convulsive "war" and "peace" reorganizations will always be necessary.

The impact of the problem has been to some extent postponed since 1945 by a complex of honest quasi-military emergencies and occupation responsibilities which were not present to the same degree after World War I. This cannot, however, obscure the bleak necessity for timely diagnosis and rigorous treatment.

This treatment will necessarily involve alterations in kind as well as in degree. Thinking of the Army in relation solely to its peacetime functions will not be enough. It must more than ever before in history be considered in the light of its primary mission as the generative mechanism for a first-class fighting machine ready to go into action without advance notice as soon as first urgent need arises.

It is generally accepted that the structure of the Army must in some degree be revamped, and some of its best brains have now for some time been concentrating on the extent and character of the organizational adjustments required. The substantive decisions reached will in due course be divulged, and it is not the purpose of this article to discuss them.

The nature of armies is necessarily autocratic. There is therefore a tendency to assume that the desired plan, once decided upon within the Army, can be put into effect by simple command decision, as in the case of any other military business. This view seems to be supported by observation of the organizational changes

USMC Drafts Plans
For 1949 Promotions

The Marine Corps revealed this week that officers in the zones indicated below may be considered for promotion during 1949:

For promotion to Colonel: Lieutenant Colonels in the zone—through Lt. Col. Lawrence B. Clark.

For promotion to Lieutenant Colonel: Majors in the zone—through Maj. Francis F. Parry.

For promotion to Major: Captains in the zone—through Capt. Morris R. Snead.

For promotion to Captain: First Lieutenants in the zone—through 1st Lt. G. F. Lueddeke, Jr.

Officers eligible for promotion to first lieutenant include all second lieutenants who will have completed three years in grade during 1949.

Warrant officers eligible for promotion to Commissioned Warrant Officer include all of those who will have completed six years in grade during 1949.

It is estimated that examination will be conducted in early 1949, the Marine Corps said, for those officers who become eligible for promotion between 1 Jan. 1949 and 1 Jan. 1950.

All permanent commissioned officers and warrant officers on the active list of the regular Marine Corps are required to be professionally examined prior to promotion to the next higher grade. Officers serving in a temporary status in any grade will not be examined for permanent appointment in the same grade. Temporary commissioned officers, whose permanent status is that of warrant officer, commissioned warrant officer, or enlisted, are not required to undergo the prescribed professional examination prior to promotion to higher temporary commissioned rank.

Exemption from officer promotion examinations will not be allowed for any reason. Postponement of examinations, the Marine Corps pointed out, is permitted in accordance with administrative requirements and if approved by the Commandant of the Marine Corps. Examinations will be conducted on a worldwide basis during one scheduled examination period of not more than four days.

The initial written professional examination will be conducted by supervisory boards; an officer failing on such examination will be accorded the benefit of a further examination, either before a statutory examining board or by another supervisory board, as determined by the circumstances obtaining in the individual case. In case an officer, upon personal appearance before a statutory examining board, fails one or more parts of the professional examination, he will be suspended from promotion for six months, at the end of which time he will be reexamined. If he is successful upon reexamination, his promotion will be effected with date of rank corresponding to his original date of eligibility for promotion and with no loss of pay or allowances. Officers of the grade of second lieutenant who fail on such reexaminations shall be honorably discharged from the service. Officers above the rank of second lieutenant who fail on such reexaminations

AF Temporary Advancements

Possibility that approximately 250 Air Force lieutenant colonels may receive temporary promotions to colonel has been revealed.

It is reported that a central selection board to consider and recommend Air Force officers for temporary promotion to colonel is expected to meet shortly.

Similar central selection boards to choose officers for temporary promotions to lieutenant colonel and major also are slated to be convened in the near future.

It is expected that temporary promotions to captain will be made by selection boards set up by the various major commands.

Meantime, Air Force officials at the Pentagon indicated that a comprehensive report on temporary promotion plans may be forthcoming late this month or early in October.

Basis for the estimate that 250 temporary colonels may be made is a report in an Air Force publication. It declares that these promotions may be made before 1 Jan. 1949.

Declared eligible for consideration are

Air Force Enlisted Personnel

Breaking a promotion freeze which set in during May, 1946, the Air Force this week revealed plans to promote 750 airmen to the grade of Master Sergeant and 1,500 to the grade of Technical Sergeant.

The promotions, part of an interim program prior to inauguration of the airman career plan, will be made in equal increments as of 1 Dec. and 1 Feb. 1949.

Promotions will be made by command headquarters and will not be governed by Tables or Organization and Equipment Limitations, which have stymied elevation of airmen to the first and second pay grades for 25 months.

At the present time, there are approximately 23,000 Master Sergeants and 20,500 Technical Sergeants in the Air Force.

Approximately 10,000 of the Master Sergeants are former officers. A total of about 18,000 former officers is believed to be serving in all enlisted grades of the Air Force.

Meantime, it was reported that authorization to promote an additional 750 airmen to the grade of Master Sergeant may be announced at a later time.

Top Air Force personnel officials explained that the 2,250 promotions will help remedy certain injustices to skilled enlisted personnel whose merited promotions have been thwarted because of the overages in the top two grades.

This action comes also at a time when thousands of enlistments are running out and doubtless will prove valuable in insuring the Air Force careers of superior technical and administrative personnel on whom much time and money has been expended for specialized training.

Major command headquarters will be responsible for executing the promotions and will decide as to the methods to use in guaranteeing equal consideration for all qualified personnel.

Decision to split the promotions into two increments was made to safeguard

New Temp. Promotion
Rules Set Up For Army

Regulations prescribing a new system for the temporary promotions of Regular and Reserve officers on active duty have received top Department of the Army approval and are slated for official release within the next few weeks.

A tentative draft of the revised AR 605-12 is printed below in its entirety. It is believed the official version will not contain any significant modifications.

The new rules for temporary promotions, which will be made by selection and which are not dependent on unit vacancies, but rather on Army-wide vacancies, will go into effect on 1 Nov.

Disclosure of details concerning the new plans followed months of rigorous study by Army personnel experts who have striven to provide an equitable basis for effecting all temporary promotions.

Promotions to major and above on the Army Promotion List will be made following selection processes for which The Adjutant General has responsibility. The Adjutant General will also be responsible for the selection boards to promote WAC officers to temporary grades.

Promotion of officers on the Army Promotion List to the grade of captain will be made by the major commands.

Because of its importance to all Army officers, the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL is publishing the complete text of the proposed regulation on temporary promotions, which follows:

SECTION I
General

Paragraphs

Purpose 1
Authority to Promote 2

1. Purpose. a. The purpose of these regulations is to prescribe the system for effecting temporary promotions in the Army of the United States of officers on active duty. These promotions will be based on the provisions of the Officer Personnel Act of 1947 (Public Law 381, 80th Congress) (Bulletin No. 18, War Department, 21 August 1947).

b. The following is quoted from Section 515 of the above cited Act:

"The Secretary of the Army shall determine the requirements in each of several commissioned grades based upon the total number of officers so serving on active duty and such requirements in each of such grades may be filled by the temporary appointment of qualified officers. Action shall be taken on a fair and equitable basis, regard being given to seniority, age, and selection based upon ability and efficiency under regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Army."

*This regulation supersedes AR 605-12, 13 August 1946, including C I, 4 September 1946, Section V, Circular 50, 20 November 1947, and Section XIII, Circular 72, 18 December 1947.

c. These regulations will not be construed as prohibiting the promotion of officers on relief from active duty or promotion of combat wounded officers in accordance with separate instructions issued by the Department of the Army.

d. The following classes of officers are excluded from the provisions of these regulations:

- (1) Officers being processed for separation.
- (2) Reserve officers ordered to active duty under the Reserve Training Program.
- (3) Officers otherwise excluded by separate instructions from the Department of the Army.

2. Authority to Promote. a. All temporary

New York Herald-Tribune—"The improvement in Army health since 1939 is striking. New medical techniques and new healing drugs . . . account for much of the Army's health gain. Also greatly improved medical organization has brought prompt reporting and treatment of illness."

Buffalo News—"The Army and Air Forces have achieved a nice touch, and one long overdue, with the new thanks-for-trying cards they'll soon be issuing to would-be volunteers who don't quite make the grade. . . . These little mementos may not be on a par with the coveted 'E' awards of the war days, but at least they're an 'E for Effort' and well deserved."

Kansas City Times—"White and Negro troops are to continue serving in separate army units for the present. Thus, despite all the attention and fanfare given it a while back, the President's order against discrimination in the armed forces will not immediately affect the basic policy of military organization which it was supposed to change."

Washington Star—"The United States Air Force seems to be on thoroughly sound ground in proposing the immediate expenditure of $200,000,000 on a sharp expansion of its equipment program . . . the possibility of a near-future war must definitely be reckoned with . . . there can be no doubt that the USAF should ready itself . . . to meet any emergency."

Boise Statesman—"At least once each day, a B-29 of the United States Air Force takes off from Fairbanks, Alaska, and flies a round-trip over the top of the world. Officially, the . . . flight . . . is a weather reconnaissance flight. . . . If, in the course of observing the weather, the B-29 crews also observe surface activities other than polar bears and walrus up in the Arctic regions, that information is . . . passed on to United States authorities best qualified to analyze and act upon it. . . . It is heartening to know that . . . the skeleton of a vigilant watch is being kept on the weather—and any other elements which might be injurious to our country's welfare."

San Francisco Chronicle—"The Army is right in its decision to screen out and get rid of Communists and fellow travelers who may be inducted into it under the draft. . . . The Army is quite entitled and, in fact, owes the obligation to the Nation to permit only loyal Americans to serve in it in any capacity."

Number One Air Power Needed

Since any threat to the security of the Nation is from the air, we must be constantly prepared to detect, intercept and shoot down the attacking aircraft, and to strike back at our adversary and destroy his capabilities of waging war against us, according to General George C. Kenney, commanding general of the Strategic Air Command.

Speaking at the Air Force Association Banquet 18 Sept. in Boston, Mass., General Kenney warned his audience that already our Air Force equipment of World War II is direfully obsolete in comparison with the equipment that will be needed should World War III be thrust upon us today or in the near future.

"Regardless of all the arguments about the proper strength or size of the Air Force, the fact remains that in modern war we must have the Number One air power in the world if we expect to survive," the General declared, adding:

"As long as we possess the Number One air power in time of peace we will have a strong influence for maintaining that peace. No nation or combination of nations will even consider attacking us if faced with certain destruction. On the other hand, no aggressor would hesitate long if he believed that he could strike without fear of effective retaliation."

After a review of the needs of the Air Force—radar stations, bases, fighter-interceptor aircraft trained for emergencies and constantly ready to take off, General Kenney said that such things would be expensive in terms of dollars, but "cheap compared to what just one atomic bomb on one of our major cities would cost this country."

Referring to the defensive hand of air power as the "left hand," General Kenney then listed some of the needs of the "right hand," the punching hand, the hand that delivers the "knock-out"—the long range striking force, the mission of which is to be able to take off at any time, to strike anywhere in the world, to destroy the enemy's war industry, fuel supplies, aircraft factories, communications—in short, "his capability of waging war."

"This force, this 'right arm' must be trained and equipped to take off on a telephone call with no more delay than a few hours for preflight inspection and for loading of fuel and bombs," he continued, adding:

"Its size and capabilities will have to be determined like the rest of the military establishment by the amount of funds made available by the people of the country acting through their representatives in Congress."

"Its capability is what we should be interested in primarily. If a potential adversary has the capability of dropping a thousand bombs on us and we are ready and able to drop a thousand and one bombs back on him, he certainly will hesitate to start anything," the General declared.

Again warning against obsolescence, not only in equipment but in thinking as well, General Kenney made the pointed observation that we are living in an air age and that we must so gear our thinking that we can survive in an air age.

"The time to start preparing is now," he concluded.

The Army and Navy Journal is the personal intelligence service for every well informed service man.

Transportation of Dependents

Based on five varying cases involving reimbursement for the transportation of dependents of naval personnel, the Comptroller General has rendered the following blanket digest—decision B78-570, in the instant cases and for the settlement of future similar cases:

"In view of the fact that the provisions of section 12 of the Pay Readjustment Act of 1942 and Executive Order No. 9222, respecting the payment in money of amounts equal to the commercial transportation costs for the whole or such part of the travel of dependents of military personnel, upon a permanent change of station, for which transportation in kind is not furnished, are not self-executing, reimbursement for travel of dependents of naval personnel is not authorized on a commercial cost basis in the absence of Navy regulations providing thereof."

"Where transportation in kind (first-class rail) for the travel of a Navy officer's dependent was furnished for the full distance authorized by law, and, as a matter of personal convenience—in order to stop over en route—the officer elected not to accept a transportation request for Pullman accommodations but used personal funds for such accommodations, it may not be concluded that, because the officer did not receive for his dependent the maximum transportation accommodations the Government was willing to furnish, transportation in kind for a part of the distance was not furnished so as to entitle the officer under the applicable law and regulations to any reimbursement."

"Dependents of a Navy enlisted man who obtained Pullman accommodations by the use of a Pullman transportation request for a portion of the distance for which transportation in kind was authorized by section 12 of the Pay Readjustment Act of 1942, and who obtained rail tickets by the use of personal funds instead of using the rail transportation request furnished by the Government, were not furnished transportation in kind within the meaning of said section for all or part of such trip, and, therefore, reimbursement may be made on a mileage basis for the authorized distance, under the act of 27 April 1946, and U. S. Navy Travel Instructions, less the cost to the Government for the Pullman accommodations used."

"Where the dependent of a Navy officer, on account of whom section 12 of the Pay Readjustment Act of 1942 authorizes transportation in kind, exchanged the rail transportation request furnished by the Government for a rail ticket but used only a portion of such ticket, completing the remainder of travel by automobile at personal expense, and did not use the Pullman accommodation request furnished, reimbursement for the latter portion of the journey may not be made on a mileage basis; however, payment may be made in the amount of the refund obtained from the carrier for the unused portion of the ticket but not as to the Pullman accommodations not used."

"Where, due to a rail strike, dependents of transferred Navy enlisted man were unable to utilize rail transportation provided by the Government except for the shipment of baggage, and the transportation requests had been exchanged for tickets and Pullman reservations on which the Government may obtain refunds, reimbursement may be made to claimant in the amount obtained as refund on all of said tickets."

Standardized NME Commission

Secretary of Defense James Forrestal and Secretary of the Treasury John Snyder, acting for the Coast Guard, have approved a standardized certificate of commission for all officers of the National Military Establishment.

The standardized commission, which will replace more than 40 forms now utilized by the various services, will be put into use within the next three months.

The commission will be printed on fine artificial parchment and will be 11 inches by 14 inches.

Among those who will address the sessions are Secretary of the Army Kenneth C. Royall, General J. Lawton Collins, Deputy Chief of Staff of the Army; Maj. Gen. Kenneth F. Cramer, National Guard Bureau Chief and Maj. Gen. E. A. Walsh, Adjutant General of Minnesota.

Q. M. Association Convention

The First Annual National Convention of the Quartermaster Association will be held at Camp Lee, Va., 21-22 Oct., with General J. Lawton Collins, USA, Deputy Chief of Staff; and Dr. Detlev W. Bronk, Chairman, National Research Council of the National Academy of Sciences, scheduled to make major addresses. Reservations are available through the Association's offices, 1026 17th St., N.W., Washington 8, D. C.

Maj. Gen. Byron to NSRB

Maj. Gen. Joseph W. Byron, ORC and USMA '41, has joined the staff of the National Securities Resource Board as director of the division concerned with national security planning as related to shoes, leather and hides, Board Chairman Arthur M. Hill announced this week.

During the first two years of World War II, General Byron was in charge of a similar industry unit in the War Production Board. He is Chairman of the Board of W. D. Byron and Sons, tanners, of Williamsport, Md.

1st Cavalry Prays for Peace

From the towering crater of mighty Fujiyama, in Japan, which for centuries has looked down upon a world drenched by the blood of warring nations, troopers of the 1st Cavalry Division offered a prayer for world peace in Sunrise services 8 Sept., three years to the day that 1st Cavalry Division troops marched into Tokyo.

The Cavalrymen, led by Lt. Col. W. B. Estes, Division Chaplain, climbed the slopes of the 12,036 foot mountain on the afternoon of 7 Sept., spent the night at the summit, and held Sunrise services the next morning, led by the Chaplain in their prayers, and the singing of the hymn, "Nearer My God To Thee."

Maj. Gen. William C. Chase, Commanding General, 1st Cavalry Division, for weeks has had troopers at Camp McNair, putting them through their combat paces, at the foot of the extinct volcano, one of the wonder spots of the world. The troops, in fine condition from tactical maneuvers and field firing exercises, are crack units composed of combat veterans of World War II, all career soldiers, and recruits, recently acquired in the Division's whirlwind recruiting campaign in the United States prior to passage of the Selective Service Act.

European Trip Extended

The inspection trip throughout Europe and as far as Tripoli initiated 1 Sept. by Senator Chan Gurney (R-S.D.), who has been accompanied by a staff representing all Departments of the Military Establishment and by a representative of the State Department, has been extended to 5 Oct. The original date of return was set for 30 Sept. No reports have been received from the group, but an official statement is expected on its return.

National Guard Regiments Organize

Maj. Gen. Kenneth F. Cramer, Chief of the National Guard Bureau, has announced that 38 divisional infantry regiments and 16 divisional Engineer Combat Battalions in the National Guard have completed organization. There are 75 divisional infantry regiments and 27 Engineer Combat Teams in the National Guard troop basis.

Delay Operation Combine

Lt. Gen. E. R. Quesada, commanding general of Tactical Air Command, has announced that Operation Combine III, a special exercise conducted jointly by the Air Force, Army, Navy and Marine units at Eglin Air Force Base, Valparaiso, Fla., has been postponed one week but will begin on October 4.

Radar Pioneer Retires

Dr. A. Hoyt Taylor, a pioneer in the development of radar as a military device and Chief Consultant for Electronics at the Naval Research Laboratory, was honored this week at a ceremony in the Navy Department in connection with his retirement after more than 31 years of continuous civilian and commissioned service in the Navy.

Ensigns Eligible for Promotion

The Navy has disclosed information that about 600 officers on the active list will become eligible for promotion to the rank of Lieutenant (Jg) in the Navy or Naval Reserve by the end of the year.

Investigate Government Publications

Stating that he has made a "special hobby of collecting Government publications several of which are inane by a mere reading of their titles" and that his "New England sense of thrift was outraged by the expenditure of public funds for some of the publications," Senator Styles Bridges (R.-N. H.), Chairman of the Senate Committee on Appropriations, has addressed a letter to the heads of all government agencies requesting submission "to the Committee for study and analysis copies of all publications issued by their organizations to the public during the fiscal year 1948." His letter states:

"The Senate Appropriations Committee requests copies of all publications (either departmental or field) of your organization issued during the fiscal year 1948. This should include a copy of each issue of each publication as explained below.

"All printed, multilithed, mimeographed and similarly processed material should be included which is available to the public, either on the basis of limited or general distribution. The Committee does not wish to receive bulletins and the like which are used exclusively for purposes of internal agency management.

"This request should be interpreted to include material published by your organization or through the Government Printing Office or other publishing outlet.

"All questions and publications should be directed to the Senate Appropriations Committee. It is desired that a prompt response to this request be made and that the publications for your agency should be received not later than September 24, 1948."

Explanatory of the request sent to the Departments, Senator Bridges stated:

"I am doing this because preliminary studies of the publications of the Federal Government convince me that there is waste and extravagance of the highest order in the kind and amount of publications issued for distribution at the expense of the American taxpayer.

"Thousands of employees are used and millions of dollars are spent yearly on the printing and binding of publications that have value, if at all, to only a small group of individuals.

"In my judgment it is essential, therefore, that the Senate Appropriations Committee look into this subject with great care since it may be necessary to include limitations of a new and more restrictive nature on the use of appropriation grants for printing and binding by the Executive departments and agencies."

Gen. Lanham to Visit Posts

Acting on behalf of General Omar N. Bradley, Army Chief of Staff, Brig. Gen. C. T. Lanham will leave Washington tomorrow on a trip which will take him to Ft. Riley, Ft. Lewis, Camp Stoneham, Ft. Ord, Ft. Bliss and Camp Hood.

Traveling with the General will be 1st Lt. Richard McCaffrey and Tech. Sgt. Lee C. Shattuck.

General Lanham, a special assistant to General Bradley, and his party will confer with enlisted men and officers of all grades to ascertain their reactions to new Army training procedures.

Officials explain that General Bradley desired to obtain at first hand such observations, but has been unable to leave Washington because of press of duties here.

Therefore, he is sending General Lanham as his "eyes and ears" to learn what Army personnel, from division commanders to recruits, have to say concerning the program of "human relations."

General Bradley wants to know how he can assist commanders in furthering the program and is certain to receive from General Lanham important data concerning new training techniques.

The trip, slated as one of a series of similar visits to key Army posts, will end during the second week of October.

Reorganize Guard Bureau

A reorganization of the National Guard Bureau to provide Army and Air Divisions under command of major generals will become effective 1 Oct.

In announcing the action, Maj. Gen. Kenneth F. Cramer, Chief, National Guard Bureau, said the NGB will be organized and will function as a Special Staff agency of both the Department of the Army and the Department of the Air Force.

The two major generals will be selected from among general officers of the National Guard of the United States.

Heretofore, Air National Guard matters have been handled by the Aviation Group, of the Bureau, headed by a Colonel. In the office of the Chief of the Bureau, will be a Planning office, Information Office and Administrative Office. Each division will have a Budget & Fiscal office, since each service will have a separate budget in FY 1950, a Personnel, Organization & Training, Logistics and Plans Group. The Air Division in addition will have a Communications Group.

When the Chief of the Bureau is an Air Officer, the Chief of the Army Division will normally be next in rank to the Chief of the National Guard officers on duty in the Bureau. Similarly, the Chief, Air Division, will normally be next in rank to the Chief of the Bureau when the latter is an Army National Guard Officer. The executive officer of the Bureau will normally be of the opposite service to the Chief.

Military Establishment Organization

To secure the ideas of the members of the Committees on Armed Services and Appropriations of Congress on the need for a reorganization of the Military Establishment, the Eberstadt sub-committee of the President's Commission on the Reorganization of the Government, of which former President Herbert Hoover is Chairman, met with representatives of those committees this week in the rooms of the Senate Committee on Armed Services.

It was learned that there was a general discussion of unification and of the entire military set-up. Representative Taber, chairman of the Committee on Appropriations of the House, stated that he believed that the outcome of the conference "will be better legislation, better organization and greater economy" in relation to the Military Establishment.

Members of Congress in attendance were Senators Lodge (R.-Mass.), of the Foreign Relations Committee; and, from the Armed Services Committee, Saltonstall (R.-Mass.), Russell (D.-Ga.), Byrd (D.-Va.), Hill (D.-Ala.), House members present were Representatives Andrews (R.-N. Y.), and Short (R.-Mo.), of the House Committee on Armed Services, and, from the Appropriations Committee, Taber (R.-N. Y.), Wigglesworth (R.-Mass.), Plumley (R.-Vt.).

Members of the Eberstadt sub-committee on National Security Organization of the Committee on Organization of the Executive Branch of the Government present were Ferdinand Eberstadt, chairman; Dr. Raymond B. Allen, President of the University of Washington; John J. McCloy, President of the International Bank and former Assistant Secretary of the Army; Chester I. Barnard, President of the Rockefeller Foundation; Hanson Baldwin, of the N. Y. Times; John Cowles, President of the Minneapolis Star and Tribune; Gen. Robert E. Wood, Chairman of the Board of Sears, Roebuck; and J. Carlton Ward, President of the Fairchild Engine and Airplane Corporation.

Officer Request Rule

The Army has ordered that requests for officers by name is to be discontinued except in such unusual cases as general officers, chiefs of staff, aides to general officers, instructors at the Military Academy, linguists and instructors for certain subjects at various service schools.

When such requests for officers by name are necessary, names of at least two qualified officers will be submitted to The Adjutant General.

New Flagship for Adm. Conolly

The heavy cruiser USS Columbus, which arrived in the Mediterranean this week along with 15 other relief ships, will become the permanent flagship of Admiral Richard L. Conolly, Commander in Chief, U. S. Naval Forces, Eastern Atlantic and Mediterranean.

Built too late to see action in World War II, the Columbus was the seventh of the 13,000-ton Baltimore Class cruisers to be launched.

USNA Faculty Assignments

Capt. Robert H. Rice, USN, has become Head of the Department of English, History and Government at the Naval Academy, succeeding Capt. George P. Hunter, now commanding Destroyer Flotilla Three in the Pacific; and Lt. Comdr. David G. Busey, has been assigned to the Department of Physical Training, coming from duty at the Naval Air Station, Seattle, Wash.

Memorial to Airmen

Returns are now being received for the fund to erect a monument in honor of the five U. S. Air Force fliers shot down over Yugoslavia in 1946.

The memorial was conceived and the funds are being collected by the Hon. Arthur Bliss Lane, former U. S. Minister to Yugoslavia. Contributions should be mailed to Mr. Lane at 2442 Massachusetts avenue, N.W., Washington 8, D. C.

Asst. to Secy. of Defense

Assignment of Maj. Gen. Alfred M. Gruenther, USA, director of the joint staff of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, to additional duties as a military assistant to Secretary of Defense James Forrestal has been proposed, it was reported this week.

General Gruenther, in his new responsibility, would act in liaison capacity for Secretary Forrestal in military and politico-military matters.

In this capacity, he would advise Secretary Forrestal concerning matters now under active consideration, but possibly more importantly would inform the Defense chief regarding other matters which should merit active discussion and study.

Officials explain that General Gruenther would fill such a post only as an interim measure.

A proposal to create a position such as Chief of Staff to the Secretary of Defense, which had Army and Air Force support but which the Navy opposed, was blocked by Congress during hearings on the National Security Act of 1947.

It is likely that, if the Secretary should determine that such a post as General Gruenther would occupy is essential to the National Military Establishment, authorizing legislation would be introduced before Congress. If this is done, it is almost certain that the top military assistant to the Secretary of Defense would not have the additional responsibility of directing the joint staff of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Navy Plans Jacksonville Base

The Navy will commission "a major fleet air operating base" at Jacksonville, Fla., according to Vice Admiral John D. Price, Deputy Chief of Naval Operations for Air.

Facilities for major carriers will be constructed at Jacksonville, Admiral Price told members of the Jacksonville Chamber of Commerce, in an address there this week. "Plans to convert Jacksonville to a fleet air base have been approved by Secretary Forrestal," he said, "and we have already begun to reactivate certain parts of this area."

The shift of strategic importance from the Pacific to the Atlantic made the establishment of such a base "imperative," the DCNO said. "Norfolk," he declared, "is crowded to such an extent that it is physically impossible to assign any more units to it. Quonset Point is unable to sustain any more activity than it now contains, and it is impossible for our larger carriers to operate there at all."

Cecil Field, at Jacksonville, will be operating by the first of November in time to receive the first new carrier air group, Admiral Price said. Another such group will be moved in by December according to Navy expectations.

The Navy's auxiliary field at Mayport will undergo the largest expansion "the next Navy budget will contain a request for funds to expand" it, Admiral Price said. Under this program, the St. Johns River and the entrance channel to Ribault Bay will be dredged and widened. Berthing facilities will be provided for two Midway class carriers.

AF Majors' List Correction

An error in the Air Force permanent majors' list, published in the 11 Sept. issue of the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL, is reported. No. 1748, instead of No. 1307, as previously indicated, resigned subsequent to approval of the list by the President.

Sec. Forrestal's AF Day Speech

Describing unification as "a matter of the spirit of men as well as the substance of material things," Secretary of Defense James Forrestal late last week declared that if the National Security Act of 1947 is to have meaning "it is because life is breathed into it by the actions of every General, Admiral, Soldier, Marine, Sailor, and Airman throughout the entire military system."

Speaking at an Air Force Day dinner in Washington, Secretary Forrestal warned that controversies will get more attention than agreements.

"We have always with us the cheerful disciples of morbidity, those Cassandras, who get their satisfaction out of negation," Secretary Forrestal said.

He explained that "the introduction of new weapons in war and the debates about their use are old history."

Concerning the progress of unification, Secretary Forrestal offered these observations:

"It is a year today since the National Military Establishment was set up. No miracles have been accomplished in that time and if anyone takes the trouble to re-read the testimony I gave in the hearings in the Congress, he will find that I said that no miracles could be expected.

"But progress, and definite progress, has been made. How much more we make and how fast it is made will depend upon how fast we achieve that harmony of thought which must be at the core of unification. Unification is a matter of the spirit of men as well as the substance of material things. Charts, lines of command, and directives do not create organizations by themselves. They are a pattern, but the reality must be in the hearts as well as the minds of men.

"There is no cabalistic potency about the word 'unification.' It is a law passed by the 80th Congress called the 'National Security Act of 1947.' If that law is to have meaning it is because life is breathed into it by the actions of every general, admiral, soldier, marine, sailor and airman throughout the entire military system.

"The Key West and Newport agreements with the assignment of specific responsibility to specific services in the fields of anti-submarine warfare and strategic air warfare, the creation of unified commands in most of the areas of military responsibility throughout the world, planning for civilian defense, the completion by the Joint Chiefs of Staff of the blueprints for industrial mobilization which will enable industry to do intelligent planning both on a short and long range basis, the consolidation of Navy and Air Force Transport Commands into the Military Air Transport Service, the manifold activities of the Munitions Board in the field of procurement—all of these represent solid and permanent accomplishments in the evolutionary process."

Commands Amphibious Group

Rear Admiral George C. Crawford has been ordered detached from duty as Inspector General, Atlantic Fleet, to relieve Rear Adm. Frederick I. Entwistle as Commander of Amphibious Group Three, Pacific Fleet.

Admiral Entwistle has been ordered to report to the Chief of the Bureau of Ordnance, Wash., D. C., for duty. A relief for Admiral Crawford has not been designated.

During World War II, Admiral Crawford served successively as Chief of Staff and War Plans Officer on the staff of the Commander, Submarines, Atlantic Fleet, and Chief of Staff and Aide to the Commander, Submarine Forces, Pacific Fleet.

Admiral Entwistle served as commander of the destroyer USS Porter; commander of Destroyer Division Eleven; and as operations officer of the North Pacific Forces during the war. He reported as Commander, Amphibious Group Three, in Feb. 1947.

Final Pay Meeting Likely

Work on the report of the Commission on Service Pay reportedly was nearing completion late this week, as its authors worked to ready the critical study for submittal to Secretary of Defense James Forrestal early in October.

Some officials have said that the report may even be ready during the first week of next month.

It is expected that the full Commission, which met at the Pentagon late last week, will hold one final session in October before the report is sent to Secretary Forrestal.

Secy. Royall on Unification

In a significant Air Force Day address, Secretary of the Army late last week recapitulated progress towards unification and said "critics and foreign ill-wishers will be dumbfounded at the progress which will be made."

Secretary Royall said that if a war emergency should arise suddenly, "our Allies would be pleasantly surprised and our foes grievously disappointed at the unity and the singleness of purpose which would immediately appear."

The following are salient excerpts from Secretary Royall's notable address:

"It gives me pleasure and it gives General Bradley pleasure to say on every appropriate occasion that the greatest single factor in America's military offense and defense is air power. We say this with no trace of envy, but with pride that we can participate with the Air Force, as with the Navy, and make a single team. And I am sure that I can say for the Air Force that it fully recognizes its great dependence on both Army and Navy—and realizes also its duty to serve—as well as its right to be served—by the other Departments."

"And the Air Force, I am sure, feels a special responsibility for seeing that unification succeeds, because both the National Military Establishment and the Air Force itself were born in the same instant. One was conditioned on the other. And the anniversary of the Air Force is—and will ever be—the anniversary of unification."

"All of us have faith that unification will succeed—not in a day or in a few months—and not without rumblings and differences of opinion. But it will succeed eventually—and it will move toward success with increasing speed as the idea of interdependence crowds into the background the stand-pat and fallacious philosophy of service self-sufficiency."

"As has been often pointed out, unification is a complicated business. It deals with millions of individuals in many varied types of organizations. It involves expenditures of billions. It has many complex interrelationships. It is only normal that men charged with the responsibility for maintaining their respective Departments will in the conscientious discharge of their duties sometime have varying approaches which occasionally result in controversies.

"These controversies have been exaggerated. They make much better news copy than do solid accomplishments, attained after long, hard and undramatic work. But these differences are by no means to be regarded as evidence of the failure of the Unification Act, or of the impossibility of securing a closer and closer—an increasingly effective—defense organization."

"All three of the military Departments have a like responsibility—to contribute the maximum to national defense. Wholehearted unification efforts are essential to this objective. I am confident that here again the critics and foreign ill-wishers will be dumbfounded at the progress which will be made."

"And, if a war emergency should suddenly arise today, our Allies would be pleasantly surprised and our foes grievously disappointed at the unity and the singleness of purpose which would immediately appear."

"America's spirit of accomplishment—her youthful point of view—her preference for progress rather than the dead past—her determination and ingenuity—in unification operate as elsewhere. These qualities will finally build up unification in peace—and in event of war they would suddenly weld together a National Military Establishment exceeding in efficiency and in military potential any defense organization ever known to history."

UNITED STATES ARMY

Military Police Anniversary

The Corps of Military Police, established in 1941 with three battalions and four separate companies under the supervision of Maj. Gen. Allen W. Gullion, USA, will observe its seventh anniversary 26 Sept. During World War II, the Corps attained a peak strength of approximately 9,000 officers and 200,000 men.

Among the many congratulatory letters which have been received by Maj. Gen. Edwin P. Parker, Jr., The Provost Marshal General, are the following two, from the Secretary of the Army and the Chief of Staff of the Army:

Dear General Parker:

The Corps of Military Police will reach its seventh milestone on the 26th day of September and I do not want the incident to pass without extending greetings and expressing appreciation of a record which is replete with accomplishment.

The Office of the Provost Marshal General was reestablished in August, 1941, with a nucleus of fourteen personnel and with fixed responsibilities of maintaining law and order, protecting property and preventing and investigating crime within the Army. In time of war these responsibilities became global for they were increased to include the important functions of traffic control, handling of prisoners of war and the supervision of straggler lines.

From this embryonic beginning, and implemented by the Provost Marshal General's School and kindred training centers, the Corps in June, 1945, reached a peak strength of approximately two hundred thousand enlisted men and nine thousand two hundred fifty officers. A tribute to zeal and endeavor.

The valorous deeds of many individual members of the Corps of Military Police have been fittingly recognized by awards and citations, and the Corps itself received high approval when on 19 June 1946 the Department approved the continuation of the Office of the Provost Marshal General and the Corps of Military Police as a part of the National Military Establishment.

As Secretary of the Army, may I proffer congratulations of the Office of the Provost Marshal General and to the Corps of Military Police, on this your seventh birthday, together with an expression of genuine appreciation for the noble contributions to the cause of country.

Sincerely,
(signed) Kenneth C. Royall
Secretary of the Army

Dear General Parker:

During the short period of its existence the Corps of Military Police has established a most enviable record—one equally as distinguished as that of branches with many times its length of service. No matter what the task—escorting prisoners of war, maintaining traffic control under fire, or the policing of occupied areas—the organization has acquitted itself admirably and has built a formidable reputation for willingness, diligence and valor. In all theaters of operation, very often under adverse conditions, the Corps and its individual members have consistently added to the finest traditions of the Army.

It gives me great pleasure to greet the Corps of Military Police on its seventh anniversary and to extend my very best wishes for the continued success and well-being of its officers and men.

Sincerely,
(signed) Omar N. Bradley

Army Reorganization

and adjustments of the last decade, which covers the full span of active military experience of most of the persons now comprising the Army.

Any such conclusion is entirely illusory when applied to a peacetime Army.

The Army of 1948, as known to the officers and men who comprise it, is based on temporary emergency legislation. Its cornerstone is the First War Powers Act of 1941. By this Act, Congress in effect authorized the President to make such organizational changes and adjustments as he might find necessary in order to get on with the war expeditiously and effectively. The stated purpose of the Act was to provide "for the successful prosecution of the war." A proviso stipulated "that the authority of this Title shall be exercised only in matters relating to the conduct of the present war."

That was two weeks after Pearl Harbor, and much water has since gone over the dam.

Under the authority of the First War Powers Act the President made many radical and fundamental changes in the Army's organization. His emergency powers were first exercised through Executive Order 9082, of 28 February 1942. This provided, among other things, for the creation of new organizational entities not recognized by statute, called "Army Air Forces," "Army Ground Forces," and "Services of Supply." It introduced many other important and novel organizational features.

By subsequent Presidential action, through the exercise by the War Department of authority delegated to it by the President, and by natural evolution of methods and practice to meet current exigencies, further trimmings were added or chipped away from time to time in the war and post-war years. These are familiar to most soldiers. They finally resulted in the structure of the Army as we see it today.

The 1948 Army, then, is entirely the creature of wartime emergency, generated and developed through a special instrument devised to fight a war and depending on that instrument for its continued existence and operation.

The First War Powers Act has not been repealed. By its terms, it is to remain in effect during "the present war and for six months after the termination of the war." Some have been prone to conclude that since it was enacted "for the successful prosecution" of a war which is no longer in any active sense being prosecuted, the President no longer has power to act under it, beyond, at least, conducting certain liquidating processes.

Fortunately, this question is not immediately critical, since Congress in 1947 passed the National Security Act ("Unification" Act) which provided that (by implication, even if the First War Powers Act has or should expire) the present organization of the Department of the Army may continue in force for two more years. This will carry us at least to the summer of 1949.

SECTION II

Temporary Promotion of General Officers

Paragraphs
Promotion of General Officers 4-5
4. Temporary appointment of general officers of all components of the Army on active Federal duty shall be made under the provisions of Section 515, Officer Personnel Act of 1947 (Public Law 351, 80th Congress; Bull. 18, WD 1947), except that appointments of lieutenant generals and generals shall be made under the provisions of Section 504 thereof.
5. Selection of brigadier generals and major generals shall be by a board as prescribed in Section 507, Officer Personnel Act of 1947. The number to be considered for selection, and the number to be selected, including the number for duty with any arm or service, shall be prescribed by the Secretary of the Army.

SECTION III

Temporary Promotion to Major, Lieutenant Colonel and Colonel

Paragraphs
Zones of Consideration 6
Promotion Recommendations 7
Selection Lists 8
Selection Boards 9
Eligible Lists 10
Reassignment after Promotion 11
Frequency of Selection Processes 12

6. Zones of Consideration. The zone of consideration is defined as that portion of the roster of officers in any grade wherein the officers are sufficiently senior to be considered by a selection board for promotion. Prior to the initiation of any selection process, a zone of consideration will be established and announced by Headquarters, Department of the Army, within each promotion list and for each grade from which officers are to be selected for promotion, in accordance with the following procedure:

a. Two rosters will be prepared—one with Regular officers, within the temporary grade concerned, arranged in order of their permanent seniority, and the other with non-Regular officers, within the temporary grade concerned, arranged in order of their temporary dates of rank.

b. Based upon the estimated vacancies which will occur between selections, and upon the needs of the various branches, the zone of consideration within each of the two rosters (par. a. above) will be determined and announced by the Department of the Army. The number of Regular and non-Regular officers to be included in the zone of consideration will be in direct proportion to the total number of each group as listed in the two rosters.

7. Promotion Recommendations. (see figure 1.) a. When directed, immediate commanders will submit through channels to a command commanded by a general officer, recommendations for or against the promotion of all officers under their command who are within the announced zone of consideration, provided these officers have completed a minimum of twelve months in grade while on active duty, and not less than six months on the current tour of active duty. Recommendations will be included on officers within the zone of consideration who have departed their commands within the last six months en route to new assignments in which case the recommendations will be forwarded by the losing command to the promotion authority. In addition, the chiefs of administrative and technical services and the career management branches of the arms will submit recommendations to the appropriate promotion authority on all officers known to be in the "pipeline." (see Department of the Army Cir. 230, 1948)

b. Immediate commanders will recommend that non-Regular officers with less than six months to serve under their current category statements be not promoted unless they have applied for extension of their tours of active duty in accordance with existing regulations. Officers who have submitted applications for promotion may be recommended for promotion, if otherwise qualified. In either case notation will be placed in the remarks of the promotion recommendation, that the officer has or has not applied for extension of his tour of active duty.

c. The first commander in the chain of command, who has a minimum of ten officers within any grade on whom recommendations are submitted, will accomplish the following:

- (1) Assemble and check all recommendations from his command.
- (2) By covering letter arrange the recommended officers in the order that in his estimation they merit promotion to the next higher grade.
- (3) Add any pertinent remarks which will be of assistance to the selection board.

d. Any command commanded by a general officer may forward recommendations direct to the promotion authority, provided the procedure prescribed in sub-paragraph c. above has been accomplished by it or a subordinate command.

e. These regulations are intended to provide only for the consideration for promotion and not for the automatic promotion, of all officers in order of their permanent or temporary seniority. Care will be taken by all commanders to insure that only those officers are recommended for promotion whose performance of duty, general efficiency, technical qualifications and personal conduct are such as to warrant considering them for the next higher grade.

8. Selection Lists. a. Upon receipt of the promotion recommendations, the promotion authority will prepare selection lists from which officers to be promoted will be selected by boards of officers convened in accordance with paragraph 9 below.

b. The rosters of officers within the zone of consideration will be compared by the promotion authority with the recommendations received. They will be checked for completeness and accuracy. The names of those officers who have not completed twelve months of active duty in grade, the names of those who have served less than six months on the current tour of active duty and the names of those who will be separated within six months will be deleted.

c. The two rosters (Regular and non-Regular) will be combined into a single selection list by a running mate system. For example, if the Regular list contains 1000 names and the non-Regular list 2000 names, the two non-Regular officers become running mates of one Regular officer. In compiling the selection list running mates will be placed thereon in accordance with current temporary dates of rank.

9. Selection Boards. a. (1) Selection Boards will be convened by the promotion authority concerned for the purpose of selecting eligible officers for temporary promotion. These boards will be composed of not less than three nor more than five officers of such grade that the board members will be senior in both permanent and temporary grade to those officers being considered by them. Exceptions to these provisions will be made by authority of the Department of the Army only.

(2) Selection boards will be governed by the applicable provisions of AR 520-5. Members of these boards will be sworn. Board proceedings will include a statement that in the opinion of the majority of the members, the officers recommended for promotion were best qualified among those considered. The proceedings of the board will be confidential.

b. From a selection list for each grade (paragraph 8 above) the selection boards will select officers for promotion by the "best qualified" method, the criteria being, among others, age, seniority, ability and efficiency.

10. Eligible Lists for Promotion. a. The Department of the Army (and major commands specified in par. 13 below) will maintain eligible lists of the officers who have been selected for promotion based on the selection boards' recommendations. The names of officers selected will be included in these lists in the same order as they appeared on the selection list which was submitted to the board.

b. Officers will be promoted in the order that their names appear on these eligible lists and as vacancies occur.

11. Reassignment after Promotion. Officers who are not occupying positions commensurate with the grade to which promoted will be reassigned to appropriate positions as soon as practicable after promotion is effected. If an appropriate position does not exist in the officer's assigned organization, he will be reported as surplus in grade, through command channels, to the Army Commander in the ZI or overseas commander concerned. Each intermediate commander will either take the necessary action to have the officer reassigned if an appropriate position is available under his jurisdiction, or he will forward the report to the next higher commander. Officers surplus in grade to ZI Army requirements will be reported to the Department of the Army for reassignment. Those surplus in grade in overseas theatres will remain assigned to the theatre concerned until absorbed by normal attrition or completion of their tour of overseas service. Pending reassignment, an officer who is surplus in grade in the organization to which assigned when promoted will be retained by such organization until:

a. He is due for reassignment under normal conditions, provided the reassignment will be accomplished within three months from date of promotion.

b. He is absorbed by attrition, provided his absorption will occur within three months from date of promotion.

12. Frequency of Selection Processes. The number of selected officers on the eligible lists together with the number of anticipated vacancies will constitute the controlling factors in determining when selections will be necessary.

SECTION IV

Temporary Promotion to Captain

Paragraphs
Authority to Promote 13
Procedure 14

13. Authority to Promote. a. Promotion officers on the Army Promotion list (see par. 3 above) to the temporary grade of captain will be made by the major commands. For the purpose of these regulations, the term "major commands" includes only:

- (1) All Armies, ZI.
- (2) Overseas commands directly under the Department of the Army.
- (3) Chiefs of technical and administrative services for Class II installations and officers under their command assigned to Headquarters, Department of the Army.
- (4) Headquarters, Department of the Army for all officers not covered by the above and for officers of the Army on duty with the United States Air Force.

b. The Department of the Army will announce from time to time the number of vacancies in the grade of captain which may be filled by each of the major commands, the remainder being filled by recall of non-Regular officers to extended active duty.

14. Procedure. a. The commanders listed in paragraph 13 above will effect authorized temporary promotions and reassignments in accordance with the procedure prescribed in paragraphs 6 and 12, Section III. The major commands will perform those functions which are prescribed for the Department of the Army in the cited paragraphs.

b. Two (2) copies of each promotion order issued by the commanders indicated above will be forwarded to The Adjutant General, Attention: AGPO-P, and one (1) copy of each order will be forwarded to the Career Management Group, Personnel and Administration Division, Attention: CSGPA-O (appropriate arm or service concerned).

c. When an officer, who has been selected for promotion, is transferred from one major command to another, the following procedure is prescribed:

(1) The losing command will notify the gaining command by letter that the officer has been selected for promotion. A copy of this letter will be placed in the officer's field 201 file.

Army and Navy Journal September 25, 1948

(2) The gaining command will place the officer's name on its eligible list in the place to which his permanent seniority for Regular officers or temporary date of rank for non-Regular officers entitles him.

(3) The officer will be promoted at the proper time by the gaining command in the same manner as though his selection originally had been made by that authority.

SECTION V

Temporary Promotion to First Lieutenant

Paragraphs
Authority to Promote 15
Time in Grade and Position 16

15. Authority to Promote. Promotions of second lieutenants will be accomplished as prescribed in this section. The Department of the Army and the appropriate major commanders (paragraph 13a above) are authorized to decentralize promotion to the grade of first lieutenant to subordinate commands, but not lower than commands commanded by a general officer. Two (2) copies of each promotion order issued by commanders listed in par. 13a above or by any commander to whom authority is further delegated will be forwarded to The Adjutant General, Attention: AGPO-P, and one (1) copy of each order will be forwarded to the Career Management Group, Personnel and Administration Division, Attention: CSGPA-O (appropriate arm or service concerned).

16. Time in Grade and Position. a. Except as otherwise specifically provided herein, no recommendation for promotion of a second lieutenant will be initiated until he shall have served a minimum of eighteen (18) months in grade. This minimum period will not be considered as either the average time an officer should remain in grade or as entitling the individual to promotion upon completion thereof.

b. Any second lieutenant (including those of the Army Nurse Corps and Women's Medical Specialist Corps) who has completed eighteen (18) months of service in that grade may be promoted to the grade of first lieutenant without regard to table of organization or allotment vacancies in the grade of first lieutenant, provided he is qualified for and worthy of promotion. This authorization will not be used for the automatic promotion of all second lieutenants who have served eighteen (18) months in that grade, but will be reserved for those who merit advancement to the higher grade.

c. The provisions of paragraphs a and b, above, are not applicable to second lieutenants of the Veterinary Corps. If they are qualified for promotion, these officers may be promoted to the grade of first lieutenant upon the completion of twelve months of service in the grade of second lieutenant.

Regular Waves Commissioned

Two hundred eighty-eight women officers were selected this week for commissions in the Regular Navy.

The entire group, picked by a selection board, were either Reserve women officers who requested transfer to the Regular Navy, or former Wave officers who applied for commissions. Women officers to be commissioned from among qualified enlisted Waves and civilian women who are college graduates, will be selected sometime in the future.

Two hundred of the women selected will be commissioned in the near future, and the remaining 88 will be appointed at a later date in accordance with the provisions of the Women's Armed Services Integration Act of 1948. Selectees will be appointed in the order of their seniority within grade in accordance with a lineal list being prepared by BuPers. Women selected but not immediately appointed will either remain on, or be recalled to, active duty as members of the Naval Reserve.

Although some of the officers are currently serving in higher ranks than their new permanent grades, the Navy does not foresee any immediate reversions.

Women officers selected for the Regular Navy and the permanent commissions they will receive are:

Lighter-than-Air

Editor, ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL:

Your recent discerning editorial following the Navy's brief, factual press release on the contract for a new N-type blimp design hits the bull's eye in calling for an immediate resurgence of interest in this whole neglected lighter-than-air field.

Construction of a new prototype anti-submarine blimp embodying wartime experience should have been begun several years ago. The entire period between World War I and World War II saw but one new naval blimp design, the K class, born on the eve of WW II but without planned armament or equipment. Better late than never, WW II led to the M class blimp though only four were built. Though not given adequate opportunity to develop and demonstrate their maximum usefulness even during the war, just as with other WW II weapons, neither K nor M airships could be expected to meet fully next war conditions, although both will continue to have worthwhile uses as long as they last. Let us hope the Navy announcement presages added real substance to its blimp program, even though at this late date only a new "design" is mentioned.

Coincident with the blimp design story, came an equally unadorned announcement of a call for young naval heavier-than-air pilots to train in airship flying. As developed by enterprising reporters, "The purpose of this call . . . is to merge the two types of flying. The over-all program is aimed at having all blimp flyers qualified in heavier-than-air craft, with a good percentage of heavier-than-air flyers qualified for blimps."

Now on the surface, this proposal might seem completely innocuous to the general reader even amongst naval personnel. But Washington experience teaches one to seek the motive in such a move, particularly when it involves return to a policy scrapped nearly thirty years ago. Things like this don't just happen out of thin air. Who will benefit by the resurrection of a practice discarded a generation ago?—The national defense?—The Navy?—LTA?—HTA?—or anybody? Why try to make aerial jacks-of-all trades of anyone or of just a "good percentage" of naval flyers? What does it really portend? Of unquestionably commendable intention and possibly done in the prevalent spirit of merger, whatever its real basis it is not new. Certainly there is need for sensible internal naval integration but this isn't even a partial answer. Actually, I fear it would turn out just another strand in the cord of confusion that has so long throttled LTA in the Navy and in the U. S. Diagnosed by one familiar with airship history, this seemingly simple surface eruption is a sure symptom of a "sick" internal situation. Of not the least significance, this personnel proposal will come as a shocking revelation to many who seem always to have believed anyone wearing a pair of symbolical airplane wings automatically knows all about LTA also; certainly, since LTA is handled in the Navy solely by HTA, one might legitimately so deduce.

Only failure could result to any business organization were it to integrate its various branches on as unrealistic a basis as is the lighter-than-air branch incorporated and administered in the Navy. While lack of interest; enthusiastic and commendable absorption in other problems; prejudices and childish trivialities, all no doubt contribute to it, the basic reason for this glaring situation is failure to understand and be guided by the cold fact that airplanes and airships are not even remote cousins but basically different types that happen to operate in their respective portions of the same atmospheric ocean. Believe it or not, it is as simple as that!

It is utterly fallacious to treat the airship, as is being done, as merely another type of airplane and to judge the airship by airplane standards; though if such is to continue the airship should receive equal treatment, which it now does not. Like the surface vessel, the airship is a displacement craft and has more in common with the surface vessel than with the airplane. It is obvious to actuality that not only administrative but also technical aspects of airships are placed under HTA personnel—personnel who are not trained or qualified in LTA, have only a perfunctory—or less—interest therein, and have all they can do to wrestle with the intricate technical administrative and "political" difficulties of the naval airplane. Even worse, it is wholly unjust to thrust this unrelated responsibility on HTA when we have gone to the trouble and expense of training LTA specialists, equally of age and fully capable of handling all airship matters. The situation is not unlike, despite availability of many baseball experts, having a great football coach be responsible for the baseball team, even though he may never have played baseball. The non-surprising general lack of even partial familiarity with airships on the part of the naval service at large devolves directly on the shoulders of HTA which reluctantly must administer and control LTA under a faulty organization. I fail to see how we could expect worthwhile results from a baseball team composed of players simply grabbed from a pool of "athletes" and coached by an exclusively football expert.

Some may have forgotten, but following WW I the Navy found dual training of its flyers undesirable, and conceded that HTA and LTA each is a sufficient field to warrant specialization in either, but not both. Nevertheless, there have been a few subsequent cases of dual training. But to those who believe they see something worthwhile in the revived proposal, let me suggest they check on how many previous dual-trained HTA-LTA officers have returned to LTA, and vice versa. Or, how many LTA and how many HTA officers once qualified in submarines have ever returned to sub duty. No one disputes the virtue of broadening officer knowledge in various specialties, just as even though they cannot be experts in all fields, line officers rightly must possess at least some general knowledge of many specialties. It takes time and money to qualify an officer as an expert in any branch, and proportionately more if he is to be an expert in several fields, particularly when he will probably devote his activities to but one specialty. During war we certainly could not take time to train all flyers or even "a good percentage" of them in both branches of aeronautics. With potential war clouds on the horizon today, do we now have time to give officers flight training of two widely different kinds?

But even if there were time, of what conceivable value could it be to any HTA man whomsoever to want to be qualified to fly a blimp? I can see no benefit whatsoever to any individual, the Navy or the national defense. A few years ago this proposition came up but with the catch that LTA men might be given enough airplane training to fly small transport planes but would not be permitted to get into HTA combat activities. My guess is that this is as far as they would get under the new proposal also. Thus, the net gain would be satisfaction of being able to fly an airplane, something acquirable privately as several have already done.

Adequate alleviation of the complicated personnel and morale problems of LTA is long overdue. Thus, discounting any value to HTA—for my guess is that few young airplane pilots would give up time from their first love to flirt with blimps, there might be read into this dual training proposal a gesture of appeasement to LTA. My crystal ball isn't clear on this. But it is evident that, generally speaking, present incumbents in dominating HTA places are becoming more tolerant of LTA; they mainly inherited this situation, and it is currently antiquated principles rather than individuals that are subject to criticism.

LTA personnel, both officer and enlisted have long borne a cross in order to participate at all in their chosen specialty. Though indisputably it has made them better all-around naval officers—and I do not say the practice should be discontinued, airship officers have been required to rotate their specialty with duty in surface craft. With billets in such craft constantly scarcer, LTA officers find themselves getting the least choice seagoing billets, sometimes under humiliating circumstances. Regardless of their relative seagoing experience and competence, even when HTA personnel fill salt water billets, they get the choice ones. Qualified LTA enlisted men are subject to being yanked out of their chosen field to serve in the HTA branch (for purging?), while HTA ratings may stay in their branch indefinitely and never reciprocally have to do airship or non-HTA duty. How does a man become a better airship metalsmith, for example, by having to work intermittently on planes? Even in the general service, we speak sentimentally of plank-holders who lugged their ditty bags aboard when the commission pennant was unfurled and have stayed with the ship ever since. Small wonder LTA looks with longing eyes at its HTA brothers.

Just as important as these personal and morale angles is the interruption of continuity through universal rotation. Numerous important projects must be carried to fruition by those who originated them or valuable time as well as money and effort are wasted.

Some LTA men may feel that acquisition of a pair of HTA wings holds out hope for their more realistic treatment. But experience tells me the proposal is a mirage that will vanish as LTA men reach for it. Why should LTA have to seek peace and security under HTA? What airship specialists need is the same "service" or "career" security other naval specialists get. Talk about the "displaced persons" problem of the world! Our Navy right here at home, after many years still has on its hands the problems of LTA specialists, the misplaced persons of the aeronautical world.

No doubt some LTA people feel their specialty would gain fairer consideration at the hands of younger HTA brothers who qualify also in LTA and eventually take over the reins. At best, that would be too little—and far too late I fear. It would not meet the real issue of unrealistic submergence of LTA under HTA. But of even more weight, any enterprise so organically unsound as to depend on personalities for even reasonably smooth functioning has but a quicksand foundation that shifts with personnel changes.

Let me cite one instance of the dubious results of dual flight training. During WW II, I visited an organization whose Air Officer was an HTA man who once had taken airship training, and now in his wartime role had under his direct cognizance both airplanes and blimps. He praised the work being done in his organization by blimps, but then to my utter astonishment remarked that he believed their efficiency would be increased considerably when blimps were equipped with radar. Yet, believe it or not, no matter why he didn't "get the word," this dually qualified Air Officer did not even know that the blimps then operating under his command had for a long time carried radar as standard equipment!

Authorities seem oblivious to one glaring feature that bears heavily not only on LTA personnel problems but also on far more deep-seated considerations. In peacetime, the service must maintain in each specialty a minimum effort and a nucleus of such scope as to permit reasonably quick and efficient wartime expansion. Unfortunately, the current peacetime airship set-up is dangerously below that minimum. That in turn so restricts the number of LTA billets, that but only a small number of LTA specialists can serve in LTA, thus dumping many on other parts of the service. HTA but recently met this issue by realistic changes in its squadron design and composition.

One familiar with the situation could produce a long list of glaring defects in the Navy's handling of airship matters. I repeat, it is completely nonsensical to lump airships with airplanes. Doing so constitutes an artificial hazard to airship development. Imagine an HTA officer possessing little or no familiarity with LTA, having to present the airship case before Congress, or having to discuss and justify the naval airship when he himself probably has never even been aboard an airship on the ground, let alone fly in or operate one. This situation is manifestly unfair to such an HTA officer. Yet though LTA specialists are available they are not called on to make such appearances. Within the Department itself, matters having to do with LTA must run the gauntlet of endless HTA desks, any one of which could consign them to the files and oblivion. Admittedly, there are some HTA men, particularly younger ones who would like to see LTA have a chance; but do you think they dare or can follow these convictions through? Within the Department, airship matters never reach the higher echelons through LTA personnel, but at the hands of HTA who generally at best can only echo impressions received after tortuous passage through the strictly HTA chain of command. Understandably, HTA opinion prevails. The situation is like having the football coach attempt to justify the baseball budget or even existence of the baseball team, when he himself is not a baseball expert, doesn't give a hoot about it, and when the baseball coach himself isn't permitted to talk at all except possibly down in a dark corner of the locker room.

Certainly airships should be better integrated into the Navy, but only as one of the various distinct categories of craft that go to make up our naval forces. But, as with any specialty, such integration does not preclude a reasonable degree of autonomy for airships also. Development of any new or poorly understood type invariably hinges upon the devotion of its own specialists. If the Navy and the taxpayers are to get the most out of the relatively little money and meager efforts expended on airships, there should be incentive and encouragement rather than discouragement through artificial hazards.

I am quite familiar with the old refrain that limited appropriations must always be apportioned where they will do the most good. The extremely serious threats and the many difficult problems involved in new undersea warfare cannot be too strongly emphasized. If the Navy is finally convinced that the airship can become a useful anti-submarine type, then the situation should be so clearly and strongly presented to Congress that there will be sufficient appropriations and other considerations for airships to give them a legitimate chance. Such a presentation to Congress should be forcefully and clearly made by someone with experience who can speak authoritatively on the subject. Obviously, the vastly larger airplane arm needs a great deal more money than do airships. But even by an "adjusted" comparison, airplanes get thousand-dollar notes where air-

Transfer Top AF Generals

Lt. Gen. Curtis E. LeMay, Commander of United States Air Forces in Europe, has been selected to head the Strategic Air Command, succeeding General George C. Kenney, who becomes commanding general of the Air University at Maxwell AFB, Ala. General Kenney had headed the SAC for two and a half years.

In another change, the Air Force transferred Lt. Gen. John K. Cannon, Commanding General of the Air Training Command, to General LeMay's former post.

Maj. Gen. Robert W. Harper, presently commander of the Air University will succeed General Cannon as commanding general of Air Training Command, with headquarters at Barksdale Air Force Base, Shreveport, La.

Air Force Housing Plans

Air Force officials reportedly are completing plans for inauguration of a multi-million dollar housing program for dependents' quarters at bases in the United States and abroad.

Secretary of the Air Force, W. Stuart Symington has said that "no program within the Air Force, unless war comes, is as desperate as the housing program of the Air Force."

The Army and Air Force have announced that $75,000,000 will be expended for such housing, with priority to be given to family units. Of this sum, $21,000,000 is slated for construction of bachelor quarters.

The Army has reported preliminary details of its housing program. It is likely now that the Air Force shortly will reveal where its units are to be erected.

Air Force Strength

Strength of the Air Force was increased by 8,520 men during August, of which 8,000 were enlisted, 20 warrant and 500 officer personnel.

This brought the Air Force to a total strength of 406,270 on 1 Sept., of whom 130,000 are serving overseas, compared with 126,000 serving abroad on 1 Aug.

In the Air Reserve, totals remained unchanged through the month. There are 21,000 officers assigned to organized units; 24,000 officers to composite units; 22,000 enlisted men to organized units; and 7,000 enlisted men to composite units.

The Air National Guard gained 250 officers during August to bring its strength to 4,500 officers and 25,000 enlisted men.

AF Plane Purchases O.K'd

The President has approved Air Force plans to purchase 213 airplanes at a cost of $103,600,000. The breakdown is as follows:

Lockheed, 5-80C, 100; Republic F-84C, 100; and Boeing B-54A, formerly the B-50C, 13.

Approved by Secretary of Defense James Forrestal and awaiting White House certification are plans for expenditure of $96,000,000 for additional aircraft.

AF To Recall 10,000 Officers

The Air Force will recall during the next 10 months 10,000 specially-qualified Air Reserve and Air National Guard officers who volunteer for three year tours of duty.

In releasing details concerning these recalls today, Air Force officials said vacancies exist in a wide range of professional, technical and administrative field for officers under 45 years of age for all grades through lieutenant colonel and in a limited number of technical positions for colonel.

Most needed are college graduate second lieutenants.

The majority of the positions will be filled by non-rated officers, since there are only limited requirements for rated officers, and these are principally for navigators with radar experience. Sufficient applications already have been received from flying officers to fill the immediate requirements of the Air Force; in fact, there are not enough flying assignments now for all the qualified rated officers who are seeking active duty.

Air Reserve and Air National Guard officers who are recalled may apply for consideration for commissions as Regular officers in the USAF if they meet age and physical requirements.

To make up the difference between the present officer strength of the USAF and the 58,000 authorized by 1 July 1949, the Air Force plans to procure approximately 12,500 officers. Twenty-five hundred of these will come from the Air ROTC, officer candidate and aviation cadet classes, the United States Military Academy, and from a school which will indoctrinate technical and professional officers without prior military service who will be commissioned directly out of civilian life. The remainder will be Air Reserve and Air National Guard officers who volunteer for recall.

Officers will be recalled in the highest grades they held prior to separation processing, and will not receive their "terminal leave promotion" grades.

Air Reserve and Air National Guard officers with military or civilian experience in the following fields will be considered for voluntary recall:

Communications—electronics and radar; supply—procurement, production and renegotiation; management—finance, accounting, budgeting, and statistics; Inspection—technical and administrative; air installation—civil engineering; intelligence (especially photo-interpreters); radar navigation; aeronautical engineering; chemistry; public information; weather; law, photography, and personnel.

Application Form 125, which can be obtained at local Air Reserve units, all Air Force Bases, recruiting stations, or by writing USAF Headquarters in Washington, attention "recall" should be used by officers applying for active duty.

MOWW Salutes Air Force

In tribute to the Air Force on its first anniversary as an autonomous arm of the National Military Establishment, Col. Forrest F. Watson, Commander-in-Chief of the Military Order of the World Wars, issued the following statement on behalf of the Order:

"Today, The Military Order of the World Wars salutes the U. S. Air Force, and commends its spirit, stamina and courage. May this be an opportunity for the American public to glory in the traditions of our Air Arm and at the same time give earnest attention and active support to the maintaining of our Air Force, so well-equipped and so well-manned and trained that it will soar through the skies, like the American Eagle—unbeatable."

Air Force Academy

Legislation to provide for creation of an Air Force Academy, coequal with the U. S. Military Academy and the U. S. Naval Academy, will be introduced in the 81st Congress.

Furthermore, the measure is to have the active sponsorship of Representative Dewey Short (R-Mo.), who is slated to succeed Representative Walter Andrews (R-N.Y.), as Chairman of the House Committee on Armed Services.

Representative Short told the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL this week that he favors establishment of an Academy to train airmen and indicated his intention to introduce appropriate legislation soon after the new Congress convenes.

The need for an Air Force Academy was told before a House subcommittee on Air Force appropriations this year by General Carl Spaatz, former AF Chief of Staff.

Joining with General Spaatz was Secretary of the Air Force W. Stuart Symington who recited efforts to work out a plan whereby one-third of the Air Force officers would come from Annapolis and another one-third from West Point.

The cost, however, would be prohibitive, Secretary Symington declared, citing Navy estimates that $70,000,000 a year would be required for five years for 175 students.

Secretary Symington said the Air Force could establish an Air Academy at Randolph Field for $65,000,000, with an additional $17,000,000 required to move present activities to two other Air Force bases.

Flight Service Anniversary

Flight Service, one of the four support services under the Military Air Transport Service, USAF, celebrated its fourth anniversary 20 Sept.

Originally organized in 1944, it then operated in conjunction with the Civil Aeronautics Administration Air Route Traffic Control Centers. In 1946, due to increased commercial flying, Flight Service was withdrawn from the CAA centers and nine Flight Service centers were established at U. S. Air Force bases.

The mission of Flight Service is to help assure safe long range flight operations within the continental United States and such other areas as required, by following the progress of military aircraft in flight, rendering advisory service to pilots and other personnel, clearing aircraft for approved flight, surveying airfields, for emergency use, coordinating hurricane evacuation of military aircraft, and reporting violations of flying regulations.

Late in 1947, the Navy, Marines and Coast Guard began use of the Service so that at this time Flight Service is providing assistance to all the Military Services—Army, Navy and Air Force.

Gen. Vandenberg at Mitchell

General Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Chief of Staff, U. S. Air Force, was honor guest at the Mitchell AFB observance of Air Force Day, 18 Sept. The Air Force chief arrived by air in time to review the entire three-hour show staged at Mitchell in celebration of the first anniversary of an autonomous USAF.

The general attended a luncheon at the Officers' Club sponsored by Col. Thomas C. Musgrave Jr., Base Commander, and later appeared on an NBC broadcast originating in the 52d All Weather Fighter Group's war room. Independent radio stations carried on-the-spot broadcasts of the air show.

Otis Air Force Base

Command jurisdiction of Otis Air Force Base, Falmouth, Mass., is being transferred from the Navy to the Air Force. The base, which has been under USAF permit to the Navy since 1 July, will be used jointly by the Air Force and the Navy.

USAF's Strategic Air Command will move several units, now including approximately 700 personnel, into the base within the next few weeks.

Air Force units involved in the move will include the 33d Fighter Wing, with the 33d Fighter Group, the 33d Maintenance and Supply Group, and the 33d Air Base Group, all now at Walker AFB, Roswell, N. M.

Naval planes based at Otis AFB will supply vital support to units of the Atlantic Fleet operating in that area.

Air ROTC in 15 More Schools

The U. S. Air Force has added 15 colleges and universities to the 95 which previously conducted Air ROTC Training. The new units in the four Air Force areas of the Air Defense Command, which monitors the program are:

First Air Force: Trinity College, Hartford, Conn.

Fourth Air Force: Fresno State College, Fresno, Calif.; Arizona State College, Tampa, Ariz.; and Loyola University of Los Angeles, Los Angeles, Calif.

Tenth Air Force: St. Thomas College, St. Paul, Minn.; Wisconsin State Teachers College, Superior, Wis.; Bradley University, Peoria, Ill.; Washburn Municipal, Topeka, Kans.; Ball State Teachers College, Muncie, Ind.; and Butler University, Indianapolis, Ind.

Fourteenth Air Force: East Carolina State Teachers College, Greenville, N. C.; University of Miami, Miami, Fla.; Southern Methodist University, Dallas, Tex.; Baylor University, Waco, Tex.; and Southwestern Louisiana Institute, Lafayette, La.

all permanent grade lieutenant colonels not holding temporary appointments as colonels or higher; and all other officers, regardless of permanent grade, who were reduced from the temporary grade of lieutenant colonel without cause during the grade readjustment period.

Criteria for Reserve officers are reported to be as follows:

All officers currently serving in the temporary grade of Lt. Colonel who were 33 or more years of age, or who completed 8 or more years active federal commissioned service prior to 1 July 1948. For administrative reasons periods of active duty covering 60 days or less will not be counted in computing active federal commissioned service.

All other officers, regardless of age or active federal commissioned service who were reduced from the temporary grade of Colonel to the temporary grade of Lt. Colonel without cause as a result of the grade readjustment programs.

It is to be emphasized, however, that details related above are not official. However, it is apparent that temporary promotions for Air Force officers are in the offing, with a detailed announcement expected from Air Force Headquarters shortly.

U. S. COAST GUARD

THE United States Coast Guard recently became a model for a similar organization established by the Japanese Diet for Japan.

Known as the Maritime Safety Board, the Japanese Coast Guard is under the jurisdiction of the Minister of Transportation as a separate agency. The Board was established by the Diet following official approval by the Supreme Command Headquarters.

Through the diligent efforts of Captain Frank M. Meals, USCG (Retired), an exhaustive survey of the problem in Japan was made and an agency, similar to the U. S. Coast Guard but appropriately modified to fit Japanese requirements, was established and inaugurated on 1 May. In a letter from Takeo Okubo, the first Director-General of the Maritime Safety Board, Captain Meals was referred to as "the father of the Maritime Safety Board" because of his excellent and untiring endeavors in creating the basic law for the establishment of the new agency.

In Japan, a "Board" has an entirely different meaning from the English rendition. The Japanese "Board" is the next highest office to that of Cabinet Minister.

Extensive and serious smuggling and illegal re-entry problems were confronting the Occupation and Japanese authorities, requiring the use of U. S. Navy vessels to provide the offshore patrol. In conformity with the Supreme Commander's policy of according the Japanese a free voice in the solution of internal problems, the solution effected was the establishment of the marine safety and revenue marine service.

The Maritime Safety Board is to perform the functions concerning the enforcement of laws and orders pertaining to safety of vessels, the licensing and supervision over ships' officers and pilots, assistance to vessels in distress, investigation of marine disasters, prevention and suppression of crime at sea, detection and arrest of criminals at sea, service concerning waterways and navigational aids, other businesses of insuring maritime safety.

The Maritime Safety Board is limited in total personnel to 10,000 persons. All personnel serving on or under the Maritime Safety Board will be appointed, promoted, disciplined, dismissed and otherwise managed under and in conformity with the provisions of the National Public Servants Law.

In order to prohibit, even in a disguised form, any anti-democratic or militaristic activities, the Act establishing the Maritime Safety Board does not permit the Maritime Safety Board or its personnel to be trained or organized as a military establishment or to function as such.

125 vessels are allowed the Board to perform all of the activities of the service with no vessel individually exceeding 1,500 gross tons displacement nor capable of exceeding fifteen knots in speed.

Views of Governors

IN response to inquiries from the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL, the following State Governors have expressed their views on the recommendations of the committee on Civilian Components (Gray Board), as follows:

The Hon. Oscar Rennebohm (Rep.) Acting Governor of Wisconsin—"One of the great strengths of our form of Government is the sovereignty and autonomy of the States. It preserves stability and inhibits any group or individual attempting to seize controlling power, a process which usually is accomplished by force utilizing armed troops. So long as the National Guard is the sole property of States, unless a war emergency arises, it cannot be used for such purpose on a national plane and in fact is a deterrent against improper use of Federal troops. It would be a serious mistake to centralize control of the National Guard and rob the States of the power the National Guard gives them. In recent years there has been too much of a drift of power from States to the Federal Government. It should be stopped, especially in the case of the National Guard, because of the force it implies.

"I have described what I think is the proposal's fundamental error in principle. There are others of less importance, but brevity prompts me to pass over them in deference to what I think is the basic error in practicability.

"The National Guard is a large and growing institution because of its nature. If its nature were changed materially, its attractiveness would be mitigated and instead of a growing institution it would become decadent, losing its personnel until in perhaps one or two years it would have the characteristics of the Regular Army in peace time, requiring a draft to keep it up to strength or diminishing to nothing in the wake of a costly and unsuccessful recruiting campaign. That kind of organization can be created separately without wrecking the National Guard by borrowing its personnel merely because it is handy.

"This statement does not attempt to exhaust the subject of my opposition to the proposal of the Gray Committee."

The Hon. Sam. C. Ford (Rep.) Governor of Montana—"From a letter to Secretary Forrestal"—"I am writing you in protest of the findings and recommendations of the Gray Board with reference to the National Guard.

"The Adjutant General of my State and various National Guard officers have indicated to me that such a step would mean abolition of the National Guard and would replace the National Guard with a small State force which would be of little value in time of emergency. As yet, I have not seen a copy of the report released by the Gray Board; however, from press dispatches and from conversations with interested persons in this State, it is quite clear that the Board has included, among its many recommendations, a merger or amalgamation of the National Guard and Organized Reserve into a single Army Reserve, divorced from all semblance of State control in time of peace.

"The National Guard of Montana and of the United States, Federally recognized in its present form, should, I believe, continue under State control and any plan or scheme to convert the National Guard into a Federal Reserve under jurisdiction of the Department of the Army does not have my approval.

"I strongly urge that you use your influence to see that the recommendations of the Gray Board in this regard are not carried out."

AF Captains List

Publication of the list of Air Force officers promoted to the rank of permanent captain has been scheduled tentatively for early November, officials reported this week.

This list will mark completion of the permanent promotion selections and is to be followed by later release of the Air Force promotion lists for the ranks of colonel down to first lieutenant.

Commodore John Barry Day

Secretary of the Navy John L. Sullivan addressed the Society of Commodore John Barry this week in Philadelphia's Independence Hall during the observance of Commodore John Barry Day.

Mr. Sullivan paid high tribute to the "genius" of Commodore Barry's "leadership during the Revolution" and to his "fatherhood of the young American Navy in the years that followed."

Lt. Col. Antonelli Decorated

Lt. Col. John W. Antonelli, USMC, recently received the Navy Cross for action in the Iwo Jima Campaign while serving as Battalion Commander of the 2d Battalion, 27th Regiment, 5th Marine Division. Lieutenant Colonel Antonelli is assigned to the Executive Department at the U. S. Naval Academy as Assistant Battalion Officer of the 6th Battalion.

Sports Front

WITH the hectic battles of today (Saturday, 25 September) out of the way, both academy football teams can look forward to more digestible fare next week. 2 Oct. will find Lafayette at West Point and Cornell facing Navy at Baltimore, with both teams playing on their home fields for the second successive week.

This is probably the only occasion all season when a person can predict victory for both service clubs and feel reasonably safe about it. There will almost certainly be times when both teams will win, but on these future and slightly nebulous occasions an Academy victory will be achieved only after a hard fight, rather than accepted as a foregone conclusion.

Of course it must be realized that such brash words are an invitation to lightning bolts. 235 pound secret backfield weapons and other evidences of celestial wrath. However, from the looks of things it will take something of the sort to occasion any rejoicing in Easton and Ithaca after the respective contests.

Speaking of these easier games, there has been a bit of criticism of late of Army scheduling teams of the calibre of Lafayette, or vice versa, if that's the way it was. Why should a big strong team run roughshod over a not-so-big, not-so-strong aggregation? Why should games be slated that are such flagrant mismatches?

The obvious reason is the traditional breather argument, giving a squad a chance to rest up from one tough game and get in shape for the next one. We believe, however, that it goes a bit further in the case of West Point.

The authorities there realize two things: it is a thrill for a man attending a small college to play against one of the nation's top-ranking elevens, and it is a thrill for any citizen of this country to visit the United States Military Academy. The latter holds all the more true if the visitor happens to be an official guest, as the West Pointers rank second to none as hosts. (The above encomium applies just as strongly to Annapolis and its denizens.)

Consequently, Army seems to lean over backward to bring representative teams from the east into Michie Stadium, to say nothing of the many who come to participate in minor sports. There are alleged drawbacks, to be sure, such as the risk of injury. Although football is a clean and relatively harmless sport when properly officiated, it is dangerous to the extent that people have been hurt and even killed while indulging in it. Possibly weak teams playing strong teams are more accident prone, but this is difficult to prove. At any rate, the theories concerning the so-called brutality of football have been so thoroughly deflated that they need no further harpoons from this direction.

In short, rather than condemn West Point for scheduling soft touches, we think they are to be congratulated for inviting lesser lights in football and other sports to have a whirl in the big time. And don't forget, if it hadn't been for a reputed gridiron set-up that played Army back in 1913, the world might never have known of Knute Rockne and Notre Dame.

ships get pennies. It is fair neither to the country, taxpayers, national defense, Navy, HTA, or LTA for airships to have to exist only on crumbs from the airplane banquet table. If the airship is worth having at all, it must have a diet suited to it in quality and quantity.

Yes indeed, these recent Navy airship announcements call attention to a vexing situation. Integration and adequate autonomy for airships into the Navy itself are what is needed—not unrealistic submergence under HTA. These will not be obtained by as simple an effort as merely dual training of a few HTA pilots and airplane training also for airship personnel. The cure will not be effected by such superficial treatment: the symptoms clearly call for a major operation. After years of studying the matter, I arrive at the conclusion that LTA must be completely removed from HTA jurisdiction and established as the special category it really is. In the Departmental organization and in field forces, lighter-than-air craft must be given their own logical niches on a comparable basis with other categories such as the various breeds of surface craft, the submarines, the airplanes, etc. LTA must breathe the invigorating air of opportunity and autonomy if it is to survive and reach maturity. Not only must administration of LTA be completely overhauled, but the technical and materiel aspects of airships also must be realistically realigned to relieve unqualified HTA men of these added burdens and place them in the hands of qualified LTA men.

Army and Navy Journal

I do not expect any universal agreement on my ideas but at least they offer some solution and I hope they will attract adequate response within the Navy to end further shuffling off of the problem. If some one else has a better solution, God bless him, let's have it, and do something about the situation.

But if the past is any guide it will take a big axe to cut this old Gordian knot of confusion. Nothing stronger than a nibble has yet been taken at it. Other comparable cases have been solved but some of them required doctoring at the hands of Congress. For example, though long recognized as naval officers of a very distinct specialty, it took Congressional interest and action to establish a Chaplain Corps with sufficient autonomy for proper administration and service to the Navy, and with flag rank for its Chief to permit him to do the job efficiently. Another example is that of the naval medical-dental men. The service has always recognized that while both are naval officers, a dental expert is not a medical practitioner; yet it was Congressional interest and action that created a Dental Corps, and for its healthy administration and development gave flag rank to its administrative head. Undoubtedly, there is at least as much difference between airplanes and airships as there is between general medicine and dentistry. Comparable autonomy for airships is mandatory.

It would be bad enough were such airship unrealistic confined to the Navy but unfortunately it has been transmitted. For example, the Air Coordinating Committee composed of officials of sub-cabinet rank, about 1½ years ago came up with a negative recommendation on commercial airships. This recommendation reveals erroneous lumping of airships and airplanes by the ACC itself, but it also reflects the unfortunate airship attitude in the Navy. Everyone knows that for a generation the Navy has been custodian of airship development and so it was logical for the ACC to have sought the Navy's attitude on the airship question. Thus the Navy's failure to properly evaluate their naval phases has been parlayed to the detriment even of commercial airships.

But there is still hope. The Congress has given definite evidence of its awareness of the basic differences between airplanes and airships even though the Navy apparently cannot or will not see the light. In evidence thereof, the Congressional (Brewster-Hinshaw) Aviation Policy Board recommended that development of commercial airships be placed under the Maritime Commission. It then followed up by passing a bill that would have required the Maritime Commission to make a study of commercial airships and a report to the 81st Congress. Unfortunately, for reasons stated by the White House Secretariat as reflecting the Air Coordinating Committee's fallacious airship attitude—which is that of the Navy also—this simple airship study bill got the pocket veto. There is doubt, however, that the veto killed Congressional interest in the subject.

Let me summarize the situation this way. Remember, in the circus, the human pyramid act of sleek acrobats massed geometrically about the frame of a strong man? Well, that is just about the naval aviation picture today. But, though the rug is being slipped out from under his feet, instead of concentrating on stabilizing his own precarious act, the circus management insists on adding the airship to the heap, albeit the airship belongs in another ring with its own LTA troupe.

In conclusion, this is not my first airing of these views. Furthermore I have discussed them with various officials and feel that self-instigated steps will in time be taken. Let's hope this is before war clouds on the horizon can again merge into a storm, for given the opportunity airships can do a real job. The Navy's recent airship announcements while not an open sesame, have focussed a penetrating spotlight on a weak spot and may portend the long overdue day of correction.

C. E. Rosendahl.

Editor's Note: Vice Admiral Rosendahl has for many years been the Navy's—and the Nation's—outstanding protagonist of lighter-than-air craft. His long and distinguished career in the Service, from which he retired in 1946, was marked by constant efforts to bring about the development of lighter-than-air for military purposes.

Landed Cost Values

The Departments of the Army and Air Force have promulgated regulations concerning procedures for reporting and applying "landed cost" values of shipments to liberated or occupied areas. Details are contained in Memorandum 35-6520-5 and AF Letter 173-120.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 25, 1948

"To ensure national strength there must be adequate military forces, properly equipped to repel any attacks upon our sovereignty, and such forces must be backed up by a well organized civilian population of high morale which can produce all the necessities for carrying on modern warfare."—FLEET ADMIRAL CHESTER W. NIMITZ, USN.

IN its remarkable demonstrations throughout the country in observing its first anniversary of autonomy, the Air Force gave striking evidence of post-war advances in combat aviation. In every branch of aeronautics the Air Force is definitely looking to the future. Certainly in the air the next war will not be fought with the weapons of the last conflict. The most advanced planes of World War II are already obsolescent. In speed, in maneuverability, in design, in range and in effectiveness our new planes are well beyond the best produced in World War II. Probably the most spectacular achievement in the conquest of the air has been the speed attained by the fast new models. A new jet fighter has been timed at an average speed of 670.981 miles per hour, or more than 11 miles per minute. Such a speed tends to revolutionize our concepts of time and space. As a feature of Air Force Day 49 B-29 super-fortresses flew from overseas bases in Germany, Iceland, the Aleutians, Hawaii and Japan to converge in simulated attacks on American cities. Six B-36 super-bombers, with ranges of 10,000 miles, flew over several of our cities. B-17 drones, entirely controlled by radio, were demonstrated. Experimental craft, including a small parasite fighter, that takes off and returns to a mother plane, an all-weather jet fighter, and a tiny sonic research plane, are among those under test, and which may soon be in quantity production. In Germany the observance of Air Force Day was marked by the stepped-up operation of the Berlin airlift. Our cargo planes devoted the day to carrying coal into the western-occupied zones of the beleaguered capital. During the day the remarkable total of 5,572 tons of coal was flown from Frankfurt to Berlin. It will be distributed among German families having two or more children. This operation not only won for the Air Force the grateful appreciation of the people of Berlin, but it also served as a salutary object lesson to Russian observers. A year ago our Air Force had 29 groups, today it has 55, and by next July it will have 66 groups, just four short of the 70-group total that is the immediate objective. In the present world unrest it is comforting to know that our air arm is making decided progress toward supremacy.

THE members of the Armed Forces and the people of the United States join the Governor of New York in extending felicitations to Lt. Gen. Hugh A. Drum on the completion of half a century of distinguished and devoted military service. The son of a gallant Army officer who was killed at the Battle of San Juan in Cuba during the War with Spain General Drum entered the Army as a commissioned officer in 1898 before he was nineteen years old. In peace and in war he has had a brilliant record. While a junior officer he was commended and later awarded the Silver Star for heroism in action in the Philippines. He was an honor graduate of the School of the Line and subsequently a member of the faculty of the Army Service School. He was a member of the expedition to Vera Cruz. In 1917 he accompanied General John J. Pershing to France and was Chief of Staff of the First Army, participating in the Aisne-Marne, the St. Mihiel and the Meuse-Argonne offensives. Subsequent to World War I he was The Inspector General of the Army, Deputy Chief of Staff and Commanding General of the Hawaiian Department. During World War II he served with distinction as Commanding General of the Eastern Defense Command. Retiring from the Regular Army in 1943 he was immediately appointed by Governor Dewey to head the New York State Guard and later to command the new National Guard of New York. At his own insistence he has now been relieved of this assignment and transferred to the State Reserve as of 1 October. Few officers in our history have so successfully filled so many and such varied and important assignments as has General Drum. His great genius for organization, his force and vigor, and his remarkable ability have made a lasting impression on our military establishment. To him is due much of the credit for the outstanding success in battle of our troops in both World Wars, and for the brilliant staff work that has been so characteristic of our field operations. Though General Drum is now retiring from active military duties it is good to feel that he is still available for consultation on our military problems, and for service in an active capacity should an emergency arise.

DESPITE the great accomplishment of our shipbuilding industry and operating merchant marine in World War II, the post-war period has seen the beginnings of the same sort of slump that led to the decline and waste of our seagoing merchant shipping after World War I. There is some gratification, therefore, in the recent announcements of tentative plans for the construction of several large passenger liners for Atlantic service, including a fast trans-Atlantic ship of 48,000 tons gross, and the award of a contract for three passenger-cargo vessels of 'around-the-world' type. Merchant shipping is an integral and essential part of seapower, as World Wars I and II demonstrated. The Navy is vitally concerned with the availability of modern, fast merchant vessels suitable for use as troop carriers, and dry cargo, and tanker transports. To this end, Congress has wisely provided that application for construction-differential subsidies shall be submitted to the Navy Department for approval or modification in order that the resultant vessel may be suitable for conversion into a naval or military auxiliary or for other war uses. Admiral D. C. Ramsey, Commander in Chief of the Pacific Fleet, recently summarized the post-war ills of the Merchant Marine as (a) shortage of passenger, combined passenger and cargo, and fast tanker types (b) merchant shipbuilding is at a low ebb, (c) unless a long-range shipbuilding program is started and carried out, our merchant fleet will not only be unbalanced, but will become obsolete and most of the ships worn out at the same time, and (d) high operating costs, labor problems, and freight rates. One of the first steps to improve these conditions must be an increase in appropriations for the Maritime Commission, the estimates for which have been severely slashed by Congress since the close of the War.

New Angle

A stranger passing through a small town noticed that on trees, on walls, and on fences there were numberless targets with a bullet hole in the exact center. When he met a gangling youth who claimed to be the marksman, he said, "You're the best shot I've ever seen. How do you do it?"

"Easy," came the reply. "I shoot first and draw the circle afterwards."

J. W. B.—The Veterans' Administration has announced that dividends on GI Insurance for World War II will be paid within twelve to eighteen months from now. Delay is due to the complex book-keeping involved. The dividends will average 25 to 40 per cent of the total amount each veteran paid in premium.

F. N. G.—S 2821 is now Public Law 877, 80th Congress. This law pertains only to disabled veterans who are receiving a pension on a percentage basis. Officers retired for disability and receiving retired pay computed at seventy-five per cent of active duty pay are not benefited by this law.

U. F.—To determine whether or not you are eligible for any terminal leave pay as the result of your son's death we suggest that you write The Adjutant General's Office, Washington 25, D. C.

J. K.—Under the circumstances given in your letter of 6 Sept., you would be retired as a major having 30 years' service and your retired pay will be based on that amount of service. Upon retirement you would be eligible for schooling under the GI Bill of Rights. You would be able to collect allowances authorized by this law without forfeiting any part of your retired pay.

One Year Ago

The U. S. Air Force successfully completed another experiment with its automatic flight control system 22 Sept. when a pilotless Douglas C-54 "Skymaster" landed at Brise, Norton, 40 miles west of London, Eng., after a completely automatic 2400-mile, trans-Atlantic flight from Stephenville, Newfoundland.

Two of this year's graduating class at the Military Academy arrived Sept. 15. Lt. John C. F. Tillson, III, has been assigned to the Eighth Cavalry, and Lt. John C. Damon to the 82d Field Artillery (Ft. Bliss news.)

Lt. Harold J. Brow, USN, flying at 244.12 miles an hour average speed in four flights over a measured course Sept. 13, 1923 at Curtiss field, Mineola, L. I., in a Navy-Curtiss plane bettered all speed records for human flight according to an official report to the Navy Department.

2d Lieut. Hugh A. Drum, recently appointed in the 12th U. S. Infantry, is the youngest son of Capt. John Drum, 10th U. S. Inf., killed at Santiago, July 19, and has just passed his 17th birthday. The name of "Drum" has appeared in the Army Register continuously for 60 years.

85 Years Ago

We confess to considerable surprise that the Navy Department does not turn its attention to the construction of more broadside iron-clad vessels. The New Ironsides is, we believe, the only vessel of this class which we now have. And so far as the behavior of the Ironsides whenever she has been in action, is concerned, there has certainly been nothing to make the authorities backward about building more like her.

SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

Foreign Affairs—In the somber atmosphere created by the brutal murder in Palestine of Count Folke Bernadotte and his aide, Col. Andre Serot, the General Assembly of the United Nations in Paris this week received the final report of the martyred mediator. The Count recommended the recognition of Israel as an independent state, with some rectification of boundaries; effective guarantees of rights of Jewish and Arab minorities by the respective governments and the United Nations; repatriation or indemnification of displaced persons; formation of a Palestine Conciliation Commission; placing Jerusalem under international control, with free access to holy places; and establishment of Haifa as a free port and Lydda as a free airport.

Secretary Marshall announced that the recommendations had the complete support of the United States government, which regarded them as a fair basis for settling the vexing Palestine question. Great Britain and France also support the proposed settlement. The Arab nations are regarded as certain to oppose it. The Arabs have a dispute among themselves as to the future of Palestine. The Arab League has proposed a provisional government but this will not be recognized by King Abdullah of Transjordan who is strongly opposed to this action.

The senseless assassination of Count Bernadotte seems likely to result in the formation of a United Nations guard force to provide protection for official representatives of the United Nations on duty as mediators or observers in trouble spots. The organization of such a police force was again strongly urged by Trygve Lie, secretary-general of the United Nations.

If the United Nations is to survive it must provide adequate protection for its official representatives. The Palestine murders make it clear that no reliance can be placed on local authorities to assure the safety of these officials. It is understood that the guard force at present contemplated by the secretary-general would not be an army, but rather an organization of security police. Its members would be volunteers, representing various nationalities, and recruited by the United Nations, rather than by its member countries. These police would be equipped with small arms, motorcycles, and armored cars, on which machine guns would be mounted. This force would be under the general direction of the secretary-general, but the commander of each local unit would be directly under the senior United Nations representative in the area, or his designated security officer. The strength of the organization has been variously estimated at from five hundred to several thousand. Presumably it could be expanded as required. If its mission is confined to protection of official delegations it could be kept relatively small, but if its duties included maintaining order in large areas a substantial force would be required.

The shadow of international unrest and possible war hangs heavily over the meeting of the General Assembly. The opening addresses of President Vincent Auriol of France, Juan Braunigla, Argentine foreign minister and acting president of the assembly, and Herbert V. Evatt of Australia, newly elected permanent president of the assembly, stressed the gravity of the situation and the responsibility of the United Nations to preserve the peace.

Undoubtedly the delegates feel that the tension between the Soviet Union and the western powers is rapidly worsening and that it represents a real threat to world peace. In all probability the Berlin blockade and other features of the current dispute will be discussed both by the Security Council and the General Assembly. Secretary of State George C. Marshall conferred with the British and French foreign ministers on the Berlin dispute, after which another note was sent to Russia, insisting on a clear statement of Soviet policy with respect to Berlin.

In organizing the Assembly, Russia and her satellites were denied any important committee chairmanships, none of which went to any eastern European country. Prime Minister Paul-Henri Spaak of Belgium was selected over Oscar Lange of Poland to head the important committee on political affairs. However, Russia and Poland have representatives on the steering committee.

In France the financial program of the Queuille coalition government has been endorsed by the French National Assembly by a relatively small margin. This program which increases taxes is generally unpopular, particularly with the working classes. Sporadic strikes and anti-government demonstrations, fostered largely by Communists, are occurring throughout the republic. The government has announced that it is withdrawing the special guard provided for General Charles De Gaulle, who is leading the conservative opposition to the coalition. In a speaking tour of southern France the general is demanding new general elections.

Soviet satellite countries are continuing their irritating tactics against American nationals. In Rumania four attaches of the American legation were arrested and held incommunicado for seventeen hours on the baseless charge that they were photographing a port area. Later they were released, but had to leave the country. In Hungary two American oilmen were arrested on charges of industrial sabotage. They are officials of a Hungarian subsidiary of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey and are accused of deliberately decreasing production.

The four-day war in southern India was brought to an abrupt end by the unconditional surrender of the princely state of Hyderabad to the dominion of India. Major General J. N. Chaudhuri who led the successful invasion is military governor of the conquered state over which the Nizam has relinquished all control. Hyderabad has withdrawn its appeal to the United Nations and will undoubtedly be incorporated into India.

In an interview in Washington the new Turkish ambassador, Feriden Erkin, proposed the establishment of regional defense organizations of countries on the Mediterranean and in northern Europe. Such regional arrangements, he felt, were authorized under the charter of the United Nations. He indicated his belief that Turkey would willingly participate in the Mediterranean defense organization.

Great Britain has taken a further step toward rearmament by announcing that 100 warships will be refitted to be ready for action not later than next April. This action following the recent decision to extend enlistment terms in the army by three months and to double production of jet fighters is indicative of the seriousness with which the Labor government views the international situation.

Communist insurrectionists seized the industrial city of Madioen in Java and have become active in Sumatra. The Indonesian republic has sent troops to suppress the rebels, variously estimated to number between three and fifteen thousand.

The Soviet government has announced its intention to withdraw its troops from northern Korea by the first of the year. This is undoubtedly a move to try to force the withdrawal of United States forces from southern Korea. The Russians have organized a strong local Communist force in northern Korea which undoubtedly would attempt to seize all Korea should our troops be withdrawn from the south. However, some of our soldiers will remain in southern Korea until such time as an adequate local army has been trained and equipped to protect the regularly constituted government. Some reductions will be made soon, but final withdrawal will await official action by the United Nations.

The Soviet ambassador at Washington has protested to the State Department that General Douglas MacArthur's labor policy in denying employees of the Japanese government the right to strike is a violation of the Potsdam agreement. This is vigorously denied by the general, who points out that no segment of Japanese society has achieved more liberal gains since the surrender than has labor. He contrasts the present freedom of Japanese labor with the control and suppression prevalent under Communism.

Honor News Correspondents—The Secretary of Defense this week paid a well-deserved tribute to war correspondents in unveiling a memorial to those who were killed in action or who died on active duty during the recent war. The memorial is in the news room of the Military Establishment at the Pentagon. It consists of an outline map of the world on which are superimposed the pictures of the correspondents who lost their lives. During World War II more than a thousand correspondents served with the American forces in the field. Of these more than 40 were killed in action or died as a result of their war service. They represented press associations, radio networks, pictorial agencies and periodicals. In order for the correspondents to serve the public and to record history in the making it was necessary for them to be at the front, to take the same chances and incur the same risks as the fighting men with whom they served. They were on vessels which were torpedoed at sea; they accompanied bomber crews on combat missions; they went through the surf with assault troops landing on hostile shores; and they were under small arms and artillery fire in the most forward positions of our soldiers. Some of the correspondents honored by this memorial were lost at sea; some fell in the Far East; some died in air raids; and others were killed in action in North Africa, Italy, France, Belgium and Germany. No war in all history was as well covered by the press as was the recent conflict. All the news—good and bad—was given to the American public minutes after it happened. This achievement was in large measure due to the energy, the initiative, the resourcefulness and, above all, the courage of war correspondents on every fighting front. These representatives of the public shared the hazards and the hardships of the troops they accompanied into action. They reported the war as they saw it. They were free to praise or to condemn the leadership and the strategy and they availed themselves of the privilege. The only censorship imposed was that necessitated by urgent reasons of military security. Most commanders took the correspondents into their confidence and informed them fully of current and projected operations. Our military leaders recognized that it was their duty to give the public the fullest possible information consistent with the national safety. They realized that the correspondents represented not only their publications and radio networks, but also, in a very special sense, the entire American public. The whole-hearted support which our people gave to every segment of the war effort was largely due to the fact that they were kept thoroughly informed by alert and enterprising news and radio agencies. The corps of war correspondents manned the outposts of our free press. Those who died in the service gave their lives to their country just as truly as did our soldiers who fell in battle.

Air Force Pay—As preparations were being made for the Air Force to assume responsibility for the pay of its personnel effective with the 1950 fiscal year, the likelihood appeared that pay for officers and enlisted personnel would be put on a twice-monthly basis.

The Army already has reported plans to adopt such a procedure, already in effect by the Navy.

This anticipated Air Force action thus would standardize pay periods for all Armed Services personnel.

Medical Department Promotion Board—The Surgeon General of the Army this week named the following officers to serve on the board to review recommendations for promotions of officers:

Col. Arthur H. Nylen, MC; Lt. Col. Charles H. Bramlitt, MC; and Col. Orbinat F. Gorinup, MSC.

Additional members of the board to act on cases of officers of their corps are: Maj. Gen. Thomas L. Smith, USA; Brig. Gen. James A. McCallam, USA; Col. Erma E. Vogel, WMSC; Lt. Col. Angus A. Maley, ANC; Ednar Lara, WMSC; Eleanor I. Mitchell, WMSC; and Ruth A. Robinson, WMSC.

Eight Hour Day for Army Nurses—Plans to inaugurate a straight eight hour day for all Army nurses are contingent upon the success of the current recruiting program, Army officials said this week.

If the Nurse Corps, which now has a strength of 4,341 officers, can achieve its authorized strength of approximately 8,000 nurses by 1 July 1950, it would be possible to inaugurate the eight-hour day on a world-wide basis.

At the present time, some Army nurses do work on eight hour shifts. Most, however, either are on duty for eight hours during the day, spread out over a split-shift period of 12 hours, or else are on duty for 12 hours consecutively at night.

Adoption of the straight eight-hour shift has become widespread in civilian hospitals and is reported highly desirable for Army medical installations. However, the fate of this practice will depend on the success of the recruiting program.

Medical Department Courses Scheduled—Quotas are now available for the following Medical Department courses to begin 19 Oct. at the Medical Field Service School, Brook Army Medical Center, Ft. Sam Houston, Texas:

Dental Mechanics, Medical Equipment Maintenance, X-ray Procedure, Medical Technician, Medical Laboratory Procedure, Pharmacy Procedure, and Surgical Technician.

U. S. Occupation Leaders—The unsettled international conditions and the threats to world peace so manifest in Europe and Asia stem largely from disagreements with Russia over occupation policies. The United States is singularly fortunate in having had in each of the major trouble spots an Army commander of steady nerves and resolute purpose, and at the same time possessed of a remarkably high degree of tact and resourcefulness. In Japan General of the Army Douglas MacArthur has won the admiration and affection of a conquered nation. He has successfully resisted all Communist-inspired efforts to create chaos and confusion. Under his guidance Japan is making steady progress toward recovery and is being transformed from a feudal oligarchy into a modern democracy. In a particularly difficult situation in Korea Lt. Gen. John R. Hodge was outstandingly successful in establishing in the American-occupied zone a responsible and democratic government, chosen at a free election by the Korean people. He thwarted all efforts of the Russians to interfere with the election and kept the Communist agitators from dominating the American zone. General Mark W. Clark, as our first senior representative in Austria, established sound governmental policies and so directed our efforts as to establish firmly the democratic principles which the Austrian government is now striving so hard to maintain against Communist pressure. In Berlin General Lucius D. Clay has advanced American prestige to its highest point under almost intolerable conditions. He has demonstrated that America cannot be bluffed by threats or coerced by disorders. With quiet efficiency General Clay and his handful of troops have made Berlin an outpost of freedom, which Russia has assailed by every tactic short of actual hostilities. These Army commanders by their skill and determination have proved that American military leaders, though trained in the art of war, are likewise qualified to render superior service in the difficult task of preserving peace under extremely adverse conditions.

Transportation Corps—Maj. Gen. Frank A. Helleman, Army Chief of Transportation, announced this week that the movement of essential Army dry cargo through west coast ports for the support of troops in the occupied areas in the Pacific is now normal.

In accordance with the policy announced 15 Sept. by Secretary Royall, the Army is loading its essential dry cargo on vessels both by the use of stevedores hired under civil service regulations and also by the use of stevedoring contracts with established companies. The civil service employees are being paid pre-June 15 wages. The stevedoring companies are operating on cost-plus-fixed fee contracts, negotiated with the Army on Friday and Saturday of last week, which contracts also reflect pre-June 15 wages, and are effective only until an industry-wide settlement is reached in the current dispute between employers and employees.

Office of The Provost Marshall General—Maj. Gen. Edwin P. Parker, jr., The Provost Marshall General, on 19 Sept., made an informal inspection of the 171st M.P. Bn., District of Columbia National Guard, Ft. George G. Meade, Md. The battalion, commanded by Lt. Col. Sylvester F. Blackwell, was just completing two weeks of active duty training at the time of General Parker's visit. According to General Parker, the 171st is to be commended for the excellent results it has accomplished since its activation.

National Guard Chevrons—The new type noncombat chevrons will become available for National Guard personnel about 1 Dec. in limited quantities.

The combat chevrons currently are available in small numbers and are being shipped by manufacturers to various supply depots.

Officials said the airman type chevron probably will be in procurement by 1 Feb. 1949.

New Navy Research Scientist—Dr. Friedrich P. Ellinger, of Koenigsberg, Germany, an outstanding scientist, has recently joined the permanent staff of the Navy's Research Institute, Naval Medical Center, Bethesda, Md., as the technical director of all research in the field of radiation biology.

Dr. Ellinger was educated at the Universities of Frankfurt, Friburg, and Berlin. He received his degree of Doctor of Medicine summa cum laude from the University of Frankfurt in 1925. After completing his internship, Dr. Ellinger devoted himself to research work at the University of Berlin in the departments of chemistry and pharmacology. In May, 1929 he was appointed assistant professor at the newly established Institute for Radiation Research of the University of Berlin. In 1932 he was appointed Professor of the Medical Faculty of the University of Berlin. In 1938 he emigrated to the United States and became an American citizen in 1944. He has been associated with the Long Island College of Medicine as the Director of the Laboratory for Experimental Radiation Therapy Research and with the U. S. Veterans' Hospital at the Bronx, New York as the Consultant in Radiology in Charge of Research. Dr. Ellinger is the third civilian scientist to join the staff of the Research Institute in recent months.

Medical Service Corps—Lt. Comdr. Floyd S. Haslam, MSC USN, administrative assistant to the Director, Personnel Division, Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, has returned to duty in the Bureau after a lengthy convalescence from his recent illness.

Army Chaplains' Corps—Chaplain (Brig. Gen.) James H. O'Neill, Deputy Chief of Chaplains, addressed the District of Columbia Chapter of the Chaplains Association at Ft. McNair Officers' Club at a luncheon, 21 Sept. on the subject, "Youth Must Be Told."

Recent visitors to the Office of the Chief of Chaplains include: Chaplain (Capt.) Robert B. Herndon, New York Port of Embarkation, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Chaplain (Capt.) Stephen Galley, Murphy General Hospital, Waltham, Mass.; Chaplain (Capt.) Norris T. Morton, Walter Reed General Hospital; Chaplain (Lt. Col.) John K. Borneman, Oliver General Hospital, Augusta, Ga.; and Chaplain John L. McLean, Chaplain Reserve, VA Hospital, Richmond, Va.

Thomas Cassidy, Acting Chief, Army Recreational Service; Maj. Wm. R. Johnson, Supply Branch; Maj. Timothy Cleary, Budget & Fiscal Division; Maj. Thomas Ireland, Entertainment and Recreation Branch and Miss Mildred Young, Library Branch, all of the Office of the Chief of Special Services, have returned from temporary duty at Camp Chaffee, Ark., where they attended a conference pertaining to Army Recreational Activities at newly activated and expanded posts, camps and stations within the Fourth Army Area.

Navy Dental Corps—Rear Adm. Clemens V. Rault will represent the Naval Dental Corps at the Conference on Dental Education to be held at Colorado Springs, Colo., 8-9 Oct.

Comdr. Carl A. Schlack, Head of the Dental Research Facility, Naval Medical Research Institute, NNMC, Bethesda, Md., will represent Naval dental research at the Annual Seminar for the Study and Practice of Dental Medicine to be held at Palm Springs, Calif., during the third week in October. He will present some of the findings of the dental caries research projects carried on by Naval Dental officers.

"Air Nix Bum Stix"—Noting provisions of recently published Circular 252, a Field Artillery Colonel has been moved to an onomatopoeic observation. The circular says: "Army will use wood furniture for all installations. Air Force will use composite wood-metal and better-grade wood furniture at all installations."

Said the Colonel: "Air Nix Bum Stix."

National Guard Enlisted Career Plan—Publication of details concerning an enlisted career plan for National Guardsmen is expected shortly.

Officials said this week that details are being worked out and probably will be made available sometime next month.

It is expected that the National Guard career plan will largely duplicate the Army's program, but with modifications to meet particular problems of the Guard.

Army Judge Advocate's Office—Capt. Willard W. Young, JAG-Res., Athens, Ga., and 1st Lt. Ralph L. Kaskell, jr., JAG-Res., Jamaica, N. Y., have entered on extended active duty in JAGO, in the Military Affairs Division and the Claims Division, respectively.

Maj. Willard J. Hodges, JAGD, who recently returned from Hq. PHLRYCOM, has been assigned to the Student Detachment, MDW. He will pursue a course of graduate study at George Washington University Law School in preparation for an assignment with the Patents Division, JAGO.

Army Field Forces—Gen. Jacob L. Devers, Chief, Army Field Forces, left Ft. Monroe 21 Sept. to visit numerous Army installations throughout the country. This week he visited Ft. Knox, Ky.; Ft. Riley, Kans.; Ft. Sill, Okla.; and Ft. Bliss, Texas. General Devers is being accompanied on his tour by Maj. Gen. John M. Devine, Deputy Chief; Col. Vance Batchelor, Assistant Chief for Intelligence; Col. W. A. Samouce, Information Officer; Col. R. R. Hendrix, Training Section; Lt. Col. L. A. Trautman, Logistics Section; Maj. E. L. Meggs, Training Section and Maj. J. E. Rossell, Aide.

Army Signal Corps—Among recent assignments within the Office of the Chief Signal Officer are those of Lt. Col. LeRoy M. Richey as Chief, Executive Branch, Procurement and Distribution Division; Maj. Bertram B. Dales, jr., to Military Training Branch; Maj. Marshall A. Berard as Chief, Photographic Planning and Requirements Branch; Capt. Leonard J. Pace to Photographic Planning and Requirements Branch; Capt. John L. Gammon to Army Communications Service Division; and 1st Lt. Robert E. Steele to Communication Liaison Branch.

Army Finance Department—Brig. Gen. Eugene M. Foster, Assistant Chief of Finance, left Washington last week en route to the West Coast for an inspection trip of finance activities. He is due to return to his office about 10 Oct.

Capt. Albert G. Lane, former Deputy to Lt. Col. James I. Casterline, Finance Officer, U. S. Army, at North Charleston, S. C., has reported for duty in the Office of the Chief of Finance. The Charleston Finance Office was deactivated 31 Aug. Colonel Casterline has been reassigned as deputy to Col. Wallace O. Steiger, Finance Officer, at Philadelphia. Captain Lane was assigned to duty in the Finance Planning Branch of the Management Division.

USAFI to Absorb MCI?—The Marine Corps Institute, first such "study" organization to be established by any of the Services, may be consolidated into the United States Armed Forces Institute sometime in the future, in an effort to unify courses of instruction for military personnel. Marine Corps personnel are already enrolled in those USAFI courses not carried by MCI.

May Change Language School Name—A possibility that the name of the Army Language School at the Presidio of Monterey, Calif., may be changed was indicated this week with the disclosure that the Committee on Joint Facilities and Services of the Munitions Board has the matter under study.

The school is jointly staffed by the Army, Navy and Air Force and trains students of all three services. Officials said the Committee is surveying the operation of the Army Language School and several other service schools in connection with possible consolidation procedures.

There was speculation that the Army Language School may be designated as the Armed Services Language School.

Air Force Linguists—The Air Force is now training 300 linguists a year, including officers, warrant officers and enlisted men. Training includes a four-month course in romance languages, a one-year course for more difficult straight language training and a four-year program of language and area training.

The first year of the longer term language and area instruction is given to selected officers only at the Army Language School, Presidio of Monterey, Calif. Second year instruction is given at Yale, Princeton or Columbia Universities and the third and fourth years are in the overseas locale of the language being studied.

Air Force Speed Record—Flying an armed F-86 jet fighter at a speed of 670.98 miles per hour over an official course at Muroc AFB, Calif., Maj. Richard L. Johnson last week smashed the 650.796 miles per hour record previously held by Marine Lt. Col. Marion E. Carl.

At the recent Cleveland Air Races, Major Johnson had flown the F-86 at 689 miles per hour on one pass over the prescribed course, but was robbed of the record then because of the failure of high speed cameras during one of the four required speed runs.

Standardize Ground Control Approach Terminology—Pilots will receive standard "wording" from GCA controllers at Air Force, Navy and civilian airfields. The Air Force, Navy and Civil Aeronautics Authority have approved basic radio telephone phraseologies, reported in AF Regulation No. 60-9.

Chinaware and Glassware Breakage—Like any housewife, Army and Air Force mess officers must guard against excess breakage of plates and glasses.

Newly published Circular 277 and AF Letter 67-e declares that loss of these items through breakage is not to exceed 5 per cent per quarter, except on Army mine planes, harbor craft, transport and Air Force crash boats and other small craft where a 10 per cent limit is set.

Army Regular Lt. Colonels

Simultaneously with release for publication of the permanent lieutenant colonel promotion list containing 2165 names—printed in its entirety in this issue—the Army this week reported addition of 5,509 captains, 3,381 first lieutenants and 1,179 second lieutenants to the master Regular Army permanent promotion list.

Added to the 7,531 field grade officers, the 10,000 junior grade officers make a total of 18,600 Army officers on the promotion list, exclusive of other promotion lists for the Medical Department, Chaplains and Professors.

Details concerning these special lists are expected to be ready for publication in next week's issue of the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL, which will carry the complete list of 3,473 permanent majors.

The lieutenant colonels' list reprinted here in its entirety, contains, first, the officer's relative number in grade, his name, his branch, and his rank if serving in a temporary grade above the grade of lieutenant colonel.

OFFICERS OF THE ARMY!

The ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL began in last week's issue, publication of the first Promotion List of officers of the Army compiled under the provisions of the new law (Officer Personnel Act of 1947). Last week we published the Promotion List for Colonels. This week, beginning on page 108, we print the Promotion List for Lieutenant Colonels, and in the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL of October 2 we will print the Promotion List for Majors. Providing official compilation and checking has been completed the lists for Captains and Lieutenants as well as the special lists for the Medical Department and Chaplain Corps, will follow.

Inasmuch as future selections will be made from these lists and that by reference to them you will be able to determine the relative position of those selected and those not selected it is important that you preserve these issues for reference.

If you are not a subscriber enter your subscription now. If your subscription is about to expire send us your renewal so that you will not miss any issues. Order promptly—the shortage of paper necessitates our limiting each issue to orders in hand.

• A limited number of copies of the Army and Navy Journal's historic volumes, "United States At War" is still available. This series, the first volume of which was published 7 December 1942 with succeeding volumes each year until the War's end, forms a complete history of World War II in authoritative articles written by Military, Naval and civilian leaders actually in charge of the operations in the active theaters and at home. Profusely illustrated, they merit a place in every well balanced library.

A small number of each of the volumes is ready for distribution at $3.00 per copy in paper binding and $5.00 in cloth binding. (Copies of Volume I are available only in paper binding.)

Financial Digest

During the week evidence has developed that despite higher interest rates on short-term Federal securities and the raising of cash reserve requirements of member banks of the Federal Reserve System, savings banks and some insurance companies are switching out of government securities and into other forms of investment that can contribute to inflation.

In the month of August, last month for which statistics are available, mutual savings banks and insurance companies added substantially to their mortgage and non-government securities folios increasing their mortgage holdings by 1.3 per cent over July. This gain was at a rate about 50 per cent above that shown for the first six months of the year, while investments in corporate and municipal securities went up in about the same ratios.

The Government's plan of tightening short-term money rates was aimed at making long term-money more expensive for borrowers, but thus far there is no sign that the aim is going to reach the target. This was indicated this week when a sale of $75 million of A. T. & T. debentures due in 35 years sold at a price to make the loan cost the company 3.12 per cent net, whereas last March the same company's $75 million issue of 30 years cost 3.142 per cent net.

However, it could be pointed out that the new bank reserve requirements, and the new Federal regulations on installment credits, have been in effect but a few days, therefore the A. T. & T. experience cannot be accepted as a sure indication of what future trends may be. Meanwhile, it can be reported that installment buying regulations have caused prices of used cars to drop sharply in some cities, but there has been no slackening in the demand for and the movement of new cars, less of which are finding their way to the used car lots at highly inflated prices in a matter of days.

Securities and commodities markets, a bit jittery at the close of last week from the tense international situation, rallied early this week with prices firm and losses registered the previous week almost fully offset.

The West Coast longshoremen strike continued this week with no signs of weakening either by the Waterfront Employers' Association or the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Association (CIO).

Meanwhile, Philip Murray, President of the CIO asked Secretary of the Army Kenneth Royall to cancel his decision to make use of non-union longshoremen if necessary to load Army cargo ships tied up by the strike. Also, Murray registered objection to Mr. Royall's announcement that the Army would use troops to load military cargoes.

Harry Bridges, ILWA chieftain, accused the Army of strike-breaking, and asserted that he could ask the cooperation of unions in other countries in refusing to unload Army cargoes. Crux of the union-Army dispute was centered in the union hiring halls—the union insisting that the Army hire longshoremen through the halls, which the Army refused to do.

The situation was partially cleared up when a Seattle stevedoring firm agreed to load Army cargoes, and in turn accepted stevedores through the hiring halls at wages prevailing up to and including 15 June.

The Maritime Commission is concluding studies on a new, long-range charter policy which will provide a pattern for extending the Commission's chartering system. Present authority to charter Government-owned vessels expires 28 Feb. 1949. It is expected that the new system will be based on the number of ships owned by the lines seeking government tonnage.

Russian competition in the Mediterranean loomed this week when it was announced the Soviet merchant fleet, known as Sovtorgflot, is planning an expanded program of operations in the Mediterranean. The organization, which has headquarters in Odessa, is to open a main branch office in Rome, and regional branch offices at Genoa and Naples, as well as at Trieste.

Rep. Kilday Favors Pay Increase

Representative Paul J. Kilday (D-Tex.) stated to the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL this week that he is thoroughly opposed to the Gray report, which recommends the federalization of the National Guard. His opposition is based on the contention that it "would deprive the Governors of the States of the prompt use of the militia in emergencies."

Relative to the expected recommendation of the Pay Board that the pay of the Armed Forces be increased, Representative Kilday stated that he favors the principle of such pay increase and that the necessity of increasing the pay of retired personnel should not be overlooked when legislation is formulated in reflecting the recommendations of the Pay Board.

Navy Ships to Foreign Ports

The light cruiser USS Huntington and the destroyer USS D. H. Fox, both scheduled to be relieved late this month after duty in the Mediterranean, will return to the United States by way of the east coasts of Africa and South America.

The ships, which will make goodwill calls at four ports in Africa and three in South America are scheduled to arrive in Newport, R. I., on 8 Dec. The ports of call will be Massaua, Eritrea; Mombasa, Kenya Colony; Durban and Capetown, South Africa; Buenos Aires, Argentina; Montevideo, Uruguay; Rio de Janeiro, Brazil; and Trinidad.

The cruise will under the command of Rear Admiral J. H. Foskett, Jr., Commander, Cruiser Division Twelve, who will fly his flag in the Huntington. Captain A. A. Burke, USN, is the commanding officer of the Huntington. The Fox is under the command of Commander J. H. Brown.

New Honolulu Officers' Club

The Armed Forces Officers' Club of Honolulu, a private organization not sponsored directly by any one of the Services, has completed arrangements to assume control and operate the facilities at the Ala Wai Club in Honolulu. Previously, the Ala Wai Club has been operated by the Navy with the privilege of its use extended to all members of the Armed Forces Officers' Clubs.

Operation of the club under the new management of the Armed Forces Officers' Club is scheduled to commence about 15 Oct., with privileges of the club limited to members only. Membership is open to officers of the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps and Coast Guard, either Regular, Reserve or National Guard, active, inactive or retired.
